The wind is like a lover,
To kiss the rose's mouth;
To gardens bright he takes his flight,
'Way down South.

And Heaven seems not so far away
As all the idle dreamers say,
And Winter wears the bloom of May,
'Way down South.

How green the gracious meadows,
'Way down South.
The valleys sing of deathless Spring,
'Way down South.

Love binds his brow with violets blue,
That glow with sun-light, drip with dew;
And rests him on the heart of you,
'Way down South.
