THE RAJAH COFFEE.

Yum, yum, yum! an odor rich and rare
Comes stealing o'r my senses upon the morning air.
Ah, yes! I know—it comes from Biddy's laboratory;
It is the Rajah coffee in all its fragrant glory.

Yum, yum, yum! I quaff the amber bowl—
The non-inebriant nectar, the cup that cheers the soul,
The beverage of the private, the colonel, and the major.

The luscious amber nectar—the coffee of the Rajah.

Yum, yum, yum! it makes the grocer grin
To see the shining shekels come briskly rolling in;
For the banker and the lawyer, the plumber and the gauger,
And the people, all are calling for the coffee called the Rajah.

LINES AFFECTIONATELY INSCRIBED TO THE PE-KONG TEA COM-PANY IN PRAISE OF THEIR WONDERFUL TEA.

PE-KONG TEA.

In India's land a plant there grows
That has the fragrance of the rose—
The theme of many a poet's song,
A gift from God—the tea Pe-Kong.

Its leaves, distilled, a drink affords
To comfort paupers, peasants, lords;
To cheer the sick and aid the strong;
The Queen of drinks—the tea Pe-Kong.

Pe-Kong! A name born to resound
In every home the wide world round.
Then 'round your tables sing this song,
'I'd like my cup filled with Pe-Kong.
