THE LAY OF THE BELL

ENGLISH VERSION BY THE
REV. J. TROUTBECK, D.D.

SOLO AND CHORUS.—The Master.
In the earth right firmly planted
 Stands, well bak'd, the mould of clay :
Up, my comrades, be ye helpful ;
 Let the bell be born to-day.
 From the brows of all
 Will the toil-drop fall ;
So shall praise for skill attend us ;
Yet its blessing Heaven must send us.

CHORUS.

The labour we prepare in earnest
 Is suited well by earnest words ;
More briskly all our work advances,
 When frank discourse its aid affords.
So let us now with care consider
 What from our feeble strength may rise .
Disdain one must the foolish workman,
 Who brings no thought to what he tries.

Reflection human nature graces ;
 For this the gift to understand,
That man within the heart should ponder
 What he creates with cunning hand.

The Master.

Take for wood the stems of pine-trees,
 Of the driest let them be,
That by flames compress'd the furnace
 Thro' its mouth may stricken be.
 Cast the copper in,
 Quickly add the tin ;
That the metals, else unbending,
As they flow be rightly blending.

CHORUS.

What, in the earth profoundly hidden,
 By aid of fire we fashion thus.

High in the belfry-tow'r suspended
 Shall sounding witness bear of us.
Till distant days it shall continue,
 To many ears a message bear ;
With those that mourn make lamentation,
 And pious souls invite to prayer.
Whate'er of joy, whate'er of sorrow,
 Inconstant Fate to man may bring,
The warning moral, taught by either,
 That tongue to all that hear shall ring.

The Master.

Silv'ry bubbles, upward rising,
 That the mass is melting shew ;
Let us now these salts commingle,
 That thereby we speed the flow,
 And from foulness free
 Must the fusion be,
That by metal purely founded
 Pure and perfect tones be sounded.

Soprano Solo.

For with a burst of joyous clangour
 Those tones will greet the cherish'd boy,
On life's untested journey starting,
 In slumber's arms content to lie.
As yet in Time's dark womb are hiding
 What good and ill are him abiding ;
His loving mother, o'er him bending,
 His golden morn of life is tending,
 But years, like arrows, swiftly fly.

Tenor Solo.

The youth, girl-playmates proudly leaving,
 Of manhood conscious, longs to roam ;
With pilgrim-staff afar he wanders,
 Then, like a stranger, seeks his home ;

And beauteous, in her life's gay spring-time,
As 'twere a form from out the skies,
With modest shame her cheeks o'er-spreading,
Behold, the virgin meets his eyes.

At once a nameless longing seizes
His youthful heart ; he roves alone,
Unwonted tears his eyes bedewing,
His love for wild companions flown.
With blushes follows he her footsteps ;
Her lightest greeting makes him glad ;
The meads he spoils of all their fairest,
So might his love be fairer made.

Soprano and Tenor.

O tender longing, hope delightsome,
O Love's entrancing age of gold !
When heaven itself is spread before us,
When swells the heart with joy untold.
O that the blissful time were lasting,
The time when hearts first love are tasting !

The Master.

Even now the vents are browning ;
Let me dip this clay pipe in ;
If as glass we see it shining,
Then the casting may begin.
Haste, my comrades, haste,
This our fusion test ;
Happy omen, prove ye whether
Hard and soft combine together.

RECIT.—Bass.

When stern and gentle troth have plighted,
When strong and weak are thus united,
There follows a concordant song.
Then try thou, ere thou bind for ever,
Lest aught may heart from heart dis-sever :
Caprice is brief, repentance long.

Lovely, bridal ringlets decking,
Shews the virgin wreath of white,
When the church-bells, clearly ringing,
To the wedding-feast invite.

Ah ! with life's high feast is ended
Life's fair May, nor comes again ;
With the cestus, with the bride-veil,
Lovers' dreams are rent in twain.

Tenor Solo.

Tho' passion gives way,
Yet love is enduring ;
The blooms that decay
Are fruit ensuring.
The man must go forth ;
With rivals be living,
Be working and striving,
Be planting and watching,
Be snaring and snatching ;
Must ventures be making,
Success overtaking.
Full soon there flow in riches no one can measure,
His garners are filled with the costliest treasure,
His house increases in grandeur and worth.

With ardour likewise
There labours another,
The dutiful mother,
At home abiding,
The house wisely guiding,
Her girls fitly training,
Her boys, too, restraining,
With notice untiring
Due service requiring ;
By housekeeper's lore
Of much making more.
The chest, sweetly scented, to hoarding invites her ;
The hum of the diligent spindle delights her ;
Her presses are cleanly, well-polished, and full
Of fair snowy linen, of shimmering wool ;
To join use and beauty is all her endeavour,
So resting never.

First and Second Tenor and Bass Soli.
And the goodman, with cheerful eyes
Looking forth from the roof of the homestead,

Tells the wealth that around him lies,
While he beholds the buildings increasing,
ing,
And the barns full of store unceasing,
And the floors with abundance bending,
And the rich wavy corn extending,
Proudly the boast breaks forth :
“ Firm as the solid earth,
Safe from misfortune’s hand,
Long shall my dwelling stand.”

Soli, First and Second Soprano.
Yet none may with Fate supernal
Ever form a league eternal,
And misfortune swiftly strides.

The Master.
For the casting all is ready,
Fairly dented is the breach.
Yet before we free the metal,
Let a prayer be said by each.
Now release the flood!
God to us be good!
Fiery waves, thro’ vapour gushing,
Down their destin’d course are rushing!

CHORUS.

Right helpful is the might of fire,
When man can watch and curb her ire.
How much of all his hand can frame
He owes to heaven-descended flame!

But dread is fire’s resistless force,
When fetters fail to check her course ;
When on her path in freedom wild
She rushes, Nature’s free-born child.

Woe, whene’er she bursts asunder
All that might her growth withstand ;
Through the thickly-peopled city
Making whirl her ghastly brand ;
For the element despises
What is framed by mortal hand.

From the welkin
Rains a blessing,
Never ceasing :
From the welkin, aimless all,
Lightnings fall.
Hear the clangour, sign of harm !

An alarm !
Red as blood
Heaven is blushing,
Not with coming daylight’s flood !
Madly rushing
Are the folk !
Rolls the smoke !

Wavy spires of flame are glowing,
On through street and alley going,
Still in strength and swiftness growing.
Scorching is the air, as driven
Thro’ a furnace ; beams are riven
Posts are shaking,
Windows breaking,
Children crying,
Mothers flying,
Cattle calling,
Ruins falling ;
All is hurry, rescue, terror,
Night like day by ghastly error.

On through hands in chain unending,
All contending
Fly the buckets ; archlike soaring,
Spout the streams, their force outpouring,
Like a very tempest roaring,
With the raging flames to fight.
Crackling run the streamers light ;
Fruitage safely stor’d devouring,
Up to beam and rafter tow’ring ;
Then, as if they would be rending
From its base the solid ground,
Fiercely, with resistless bound,
Towards the height of heaven ascending
Giant-high !

Hopelessly
Man before his doom is bending ;
Idly on the wreck he gazes,
Loss so great his mind amazes.
All the place
Void is lying,
But for storms a home supplying ;
In the blank, deserted casements
Fear is sitting,
And the clouds above them flitting
Peer therein.

RECIT.—Bass Solo.

One sad glance on the ruin backward throwing,
Grasps the man his pilgrim-staff :
Yet not all joyless is he going,
Whate'er of harm the fire has cost.

Soli.

One blessing yet remains to cheer him.

RECIT.—Bass.

He counts his lov'd ones gather'd near him ;
Behold, of them not one is lost.

The Master.

In the mould of clay compacted,
With success the mass is stored ;
Will it see the light all perfect,
And our care and skill reward ?
Did the founding fail ?
Could the mould be frail ?
Ah ! perchance, while hope we cherish,
It is doomed that hope shall perish.

CHORUS.

To Mother Earth our work committing,
We wait, and trust her holy care ;
His seed the sower lends to her,
In hope that she, at season fitting,
Will render harvest-blessings fair.

More precious seed we lay with sorrow
To rest within the lap of earth ;
Yet hoping, till th' eternal morrow
Appear, to bring it second birth.

From the steeple tolls the bell
With a deep and mournful knell.
Sad attendants are the notes of mourning
On a pilgrim to his home returning.

Soprano Solo.

Ah ! the wife it is, the dear one !
Ah ! it is the faithful mother !
Gloomy death, relenting never,
Bids her from her husband sever ;
From the band of children fair,
Whom with thankful joy she bare,

Whom she tended while they grew,
Mother happy, kind, and true.
Ah ! the sweet domestic union,
It is rent for evermore !
She has reached the land of shadows,
Who the name of mother bore ;
And there fails her trusty guidance,
Wakes no more her loyal care ;
To the orphan'd home a stranger
Comes, unloving rule to bear.

The Master.

While the bell is slowly cooling,
From your anxious labour rest ;
Like the birds 'mid leaves that frolic,
Choose what sport may please you best.
When the stars appear
Then may workmen hear,
Duty done, the vesper sounding ;
Masters toil is still surrounding.

Soprano Solo.

Wends the weary wanderer cheerly
Thro' the wild and welcome greenwood
Towards the cot he loves so dearly.
Bleating flocks are homeward drawing ;
Herds of sleek broad-fronted cattle
Leave their pastures deep, and, lowing,
Back to wonted stalls are going.
High upheap'd reels the waggon,
Harvest-laden ;
From the corn-sheaves gaily painted
Garlands glance ;
After work the youthful reapers
Seek the dance.
Silence falls on street and market ;
Round the social lamp assemble
They that home unites together,
And the town-gate creaking closes.
Robes of darkness earth is wearing,
Yet the honest man unfearing
Looks on night,
Which the evil man is scaring,
For the eye of law then brings affright.

Tenor and Bass.

Sacred Order, rich in blessing,
Heav'n's own daughter ! Thee possess-
ing,

Like with like is gladly mated.
Thou hast busy towns created,
Man from lonely wastes alluring,
Social life for all securing.
Thou within our homes dost reach us,
Gentle customs thou dost teach us ;
Dearest link of all thou weavest,
Love of Fatherland thou givest.

CHORUS.

Thousand active hands, combining,
Help can briskly interchange ;
And by emulous endeavour
Strength acquires a wider range.

Master joins with man in keeping
Over freedom sacred ward ;
Each, contented with his station,
Jealous scorn can disregard.

Faithful work adorns the freeman,
Pains the meed of blessing share ;
Honour kings receive for splendour,
We for diligence and care.

Peace and Concord, sweet and lovely,
Linger, linger
Kindly alway near these walls.
Never dawn that day of sorrow,
When the hordes of war shall rudely
Thro' this quiet vale be raging ;
When the welkin,
Which the tender blush of ev'ning
Paints so fair,
With the hamlets', with the cities'
Wild combustion fierce shall glare!

The Master.

Let the fabric now be broken,
For its purpose is fulfill'd,
So that heart and eye may feast them
On the goodly form conceal'd.
Let the hammer swing,
Till the cover spring !
Nought the buried bell releases,
But to break the mould in pieces.

CHORUS.

The Master's hand the mould may shatter,
If skill and hour agreement make,
But woe, if e'er, in fiery rivers,
The glowing metal forth should break !

All blindly, with a crash like thunder,
In rage it bursts its narrow doors ;
As if the jaws of hell were opened,
Kindling destruction forth it pours.

When strength control and thought despise,
Thereout no shape resultant rises ;
When peoples unrestrained would live,
The public weal no more can thrive.

Woe, when deep in the heart of cities
The latent spark unnotic'd grows,
Until the people, bondage rending,
No law but mere advantage knows.

The clanging bell proclaims an uproar,
Its dismal note is heard afar ;
The tongue to sounds of peace devoted
Unwilling gives the sign of war.

Liberty ! Equality ! Thus they clamour !
The peaceful townsmen quickly arm ;
Both streets and halls are thickly crowded,
And banded rovers spread alarm.

Hyæna-shapes, that once were women,
Of nameless horrors make a jest ;
With panthers' fangs, when foes are fallen,
They tear the heart from out the breast.

Nought sacred yet survives ; unloosened
Are all the bands of pious awe ;
The good before the evil vanish,
And licens'd crime alone is law.

Unsafe it is to wake the lion,
Destructive is the tiger's tooth ;
But yet of creatures fierce the fiercest
Is man himself, when void of ruth.

No heaven-lit torch the blind illumines ;
Then fear to trust it in his hand :
It lights not him, it can but kindle
And lay in ashes town and land.

Solo.—The Master.

Heaven has made our work to prosper !
Like a star, the sky that decks,
From the husk, in bright perfection,
See, the metal kernel breaks.

Neck and crown and bow
As in sunlight glow ;
E'en the scutcheon's clear impression
Makes of plastic art confession.
Come in ! Come in !

And let us comrades, round her pressing,
Upon our bell invoke a blessing.
" Concordia," let her name be called :
In concord, and in love of one another,
Where'er she sound, may brother meet
with brother.

CHORUS.

In concord, and in love of one another,
Where'er she sound, may brother meet
with brother.

The Master.

And that henceforth may she fulfil,
Whereto her maker bent his skill !

Above this lower earth's existence,
Where heaven's blue tent is wide un-
furled,

Shall she be neighbour of the thunder
And border on the starry world.

Be hers a voice from heaven resounding,
Like that of stars still quiring clear,

Which in their motion praise their Maker,
And onward lead the circling year.

For solemn things, and things eternal,
Be set apart her mouth sublime ;
And hourly, with unresting impulse,
By her be marked the flight of time.

To fate a tongue shall she be lending,
No kindness, no compassion hers ;
Of some new scene of life be telling
Of changeful life, whene'er she stirs.

And as the tone, but now so mighty,
To silence slowly dies away,
May we thus learn that nought is lasting,
That all things earthly soon decay.

Now with arm and rope united
From the earth upheave the bell ;
That to airy realms of music
Soaring, she in them may dwell.
Upwards, upwards, raise !

CHORUS.

She is moving, she is moving,
Sways, sways.
" Joy to all," be this her presage ;
" Concord " be her name and message !
