flow'rs In a shatter'd dell they grew, I hurried along and I chanced to spy a small star flow'r with its silvery eye

Then this blue dai-sy peep'd up its head, Sweetly this purple or-chis spread — I gather'd them all for you, I gather'd them all for you, All these wild wood flowers, sweet wild wood flow'rs All these wild wood flowers, sweet wild wood flowers.

[Flow'rs lovely flow'rs, in the garden we may see:]
 The rose is there with its ruby lip,
 Pinks the honey bee loves to sip,
 Tulips, tulips, gay as a butterfly's wing,
 Mary-golds rich as the crown of a king,
 But none so fair to me but none so fair to me,
 [As these wild wood flow'rs, sweet wild wood flow'rs:]

[Flow'rs lovely flow'rs, do they not tell of Heaven:]
 Oh, man may garnish his garden bowers,
 But who hath tended these wild flow'rs,
 It is not He who rules above,
 Sending these tokens of his love.
 'Tis God's own hand hath given.
 [All these wild wood flow'rs, sweet wild wood flow'rs:]
