My heart is like the faded flow'r Whose beau- . . . ty lost and sweetness flown For-got, neglect-ed, in the bow'r, Is left by all is left by all to die a-- lone; And thus am I, all hope is o'er_ That hope so cherished in my heart. . . . I dare not wish to see her more The spell is broken! We must part! the spell is broken! we must part!

I thought she lov'd, I was deceived. . . . Oh! would that we had never met, For tho' she is no more be liev'd My heart re-- --fuses, my heartrefu-ses to for-get, And yet, a--las! I must not tell, The grief that rents my willing heart,— A-dieu for-ev-er! fare thee well! The spell is broken! We must part! The spell is broken! we must part!
