Composer's note

The script for Opera With A Title has been extracted and freely arranged from two plays by Lorca, El público and Comedia sin título; they are considered ‘impossible’ plays, an experimental theatre of the imagination and of the sub-conscious, and both are incomplete. In several ways, the two plays are connected and constitute a search for a new form of theatrical expression; like many works of the period, they also call for a new morality of personal freedom. Both examine the nature of illusion and reality, confusing actors inside and outside their roles with audience members inside and outside the ‘play’. This androgyny is mirrored in the relationships between some of the characters, with The Audience in particular containing episodes of homoeroticism. Both works also feature the character of Director/Author/Playwright/Impresario revealing the pre-occupations of Lorca himself who directed a national touring company in the years of the Socialist government.

Synopsis

This surrealist opera concerns a troupe of actors in the time of civil war. What the actors are playing, and what is happening to them in the real world, are confused: they bring their fantasies to bear on their performances while their characters invade their own personalities. Thus, role-play and questions of gender are examined, each from the other's viewpoint, as well as the nature of theatre and its relevance to everyday life.

A performance of Romeo and Juliet has just taken place. The SPECTATOR, bass, is offended by the portrayal of Juliet by a male. FEDERICO, the DIRECTOR, mezzo-soprano, defends his desire to re-invent the theatre and portray the realities of the world outside.

A rehearsal gets underway: featuring characters from Shakespeare, SOFIA, the company soprano, plays VENUS who's in love with ADONIS played by the tenor, JOSÉ. They argue, however, and the latter falls for the SPECTATOR who invades the stage and joins in the love-making as JULIUS CAESAR. Meanwhile, MANUEL, a stagehand, baritone, has a crush on the DIRECTOR who is threatening to give up the theatre. His passionate protestations are not reciprocated and, wearing an ass's head, he sings a Spanish ballad about the qualities of masks.

Shots are heard and news arrives that a revolution has broken out; the troops are heading their way. For the DIRECTOR, it is time to bring the theatre crumbling down. SOFIA fears for the safety of her children at home. JOSÉ is for the rebels, while the SPECTATOR is revealed as a Fascist. MANUEL re-starts his song and, as tensions rise, the SPECTATOR gets out his pistol. He is about to shoot JOSÉ but the DIRECTOR steps between them and is killed instead. The theatre is bombed and all is dark.

SOFIA as JULIET welcomes THE THREE WIZARDS ON WHITE HORSES into her tomb-like bed but, tired of their romantic serenading, insists on taking the lead; this erotic scene evaporates at dawn. As the dust settles and daylight returns, MANUEL, JOSÉ and the SPECTATOR reflect on what the drama has achieved. SOFIA emerges from her tomb in a blaze of glory and the DIRECTOR flies down from heaven. Now the audience can enter.

SCENE ONE

In a theatre. Spain. Civil War has recently broken out. The action takes place both on stage and in the auditorium. In the stalls is the Director's desk and on stage are the paraphernalia of other productions, including a forest and the tomb of the Capulets, and a screen behind which the cast change their costumes every now and again. The DIRECTOR is on the stage in deep thought.

The musical score consists of four staves of music. The first three staves are instrumental, showing a bassoon part with dynamics p and f, and a piano part with a treble clef and a bass clef. The fourth staff is vocal, starting with a blank line for the first measure. Measure 8 begins with a vocal entry for "Sp." (Spectator) in a bassoon-like range. Measure 12 begins with the text "Spectator (approaching the stage)" above the vocal line, which continues with the lyrics "Am I spea - king". The vocal line includes a melodic line and a harmonic line below it, with various dynamics and time signatures (4/4, 3/8, 3/8) indicated.
