The King	Bass Baritone	The Queen	Mezzo Soprano
The Lover	Tenor	Columbine	Light Soprano
Pierrot	Light Baritone	Pantaloon	(Silent)
Harlequin	Light Tenor	Four Puppets	Mixed Voices

Courtiers, Guests, Satyrs, Bacchantes etc.

Scene

A moon-lit Watteau garden; running right across the stage, about $\frac{2}{3}$ back, a formal hedge, with gaps and vases; as drop-scene the Castle, with lighted windows. On the spectator's left, well forward, a small temple, partly closed at the back but open towards the audience; round it a balustrade and steps. On the right, farther back, a slightly raised knoll on which the puppet-drama takes place. In the right wing, well forward, bushes; along the hedge marble seats.

Torchbearers move on and off according to the action; the lighting to vary accordingly. The guests are arrayed in the gorgeous costumes of the period; some wear masks and dominos.

When the curtain rises the dancers have already taken up their positions for the ensuing Sarabande, which must be so planned that the King and Queen, who are unmasked and dancing together, shall be easy to identify. Before it begins, at the point ϕ , the dancers should make a sweeping reverence in the direction of their royal hosts.

Musette.

The guests now fall back, and leave the space clear for special dancers, who execute slow, swaying movements, both languid and voluptuous. The guests sing, very softly, the vocal part. Meanwhile the following action takes place. The Queen is standing somewhat apart, near the footlights, fanning herself, and accidentally drops her handkerchief. A tall man in a domino and masked, darts forward, picks it up, and whispers a few words. The Queen starts violently, but instantly recovers herself. The mask bows low, and mingles with the company.

The following Fanfare ushers in 4 Pierrot Players, Columbine, Harlequin, Pantaloon and Pierrot, and 4 singers dressed like puppets. The puppet-drama (which the words illustrate) is played on a slightly raised bit of ground left half back. The singers use appropriate and dramatic puppet-like gestures.

Fanfare.

During the puppet-drama some of the guests seat themselves on the marble benches and on the steps of the temple; others stand; others move about in the background.

The first system features a vocal line in treble clef and a piano accompaniment in grand staff. The key signature has two flats (B-flat and E-flat), and the time signature is 4/4. The vocal line begins with a fermata over the first measure. The piano accompaniment starts with a piano (p) dynamic and includes a mezzo-forte (mf) section. The system concludes with a piano (pp) dynamic and a return to a tempo.

(he whispers rapid orders to the guards; one goes away)

Allegro.

The second system is a piano accompaniment in grand staff, marked Allegro. It features a complex rhythmic pattern with many sixteenth and thirty-second notes. The dynamics range from piano (p) to fortissimo (sf).
