We are constantly seeking for another truth

Un'altra verità is inspired by the outstanding figure of Giordano Bruno – monk, philosopher, and mathematician, killed by the Roman Inquisition in 1600 for his ideas on freedom of thought and religion, and for his cosmology which saw the universe as infinite and without any celestial body at its center. The text is actually a quotation from Bruno's works. I chose this short, motto-like text because in my opinion it represents the relationship between science and spirituality in a very interesting way: the truth doesn't exist, so a problematic approach on science and on religion is always required.
