Out of the Deep

This appeared in John Barnard, The first book of English Church Music, 1641.

The original clefs are C1, C3, C3, C4, F4.
Upward transposition of a tone has been applied in respect of the pitch change.

Falsettists have difficulty making their voice heard out of the depths of the first note.
This edition is laid out for high tenors. Means are unbroken voices.

The organ is used not to produce a rich supporting background with the voice predominating, but as a melodic instrument, fully participating in the somewhat spare contrapuntal texture.

The voice is the middle line. The organ provides a descant and bass, and also doubles the vocal line sometimes.

In the full sections the organ doubles the mean and bass parts, and also gives support for entries.

Similar organ parts and verses in three parts with the voice in the middle can be found in Byrd's Second Service, score on IMSLP, and in William Mundy's The Secret Sins and Ah, Helpless Wretch recorded by The Sixteen.

Musical score for "Out of the Deep" by Thomas Morley. The score consists of two systems of music.

System 1: The vocal parts (Mean, Alto 1, Alto 2, Tenor, Bass) are in common time (indicated by a '4'). The organ part is also in common time. The vocal parts enter at measure 1, and the organ part begins at measure 2. The vocal parts sing a sustained note (A4 for Mean, G4 for Alto 1, F4 for Alto 2, E4 for Tenor, C4 for Bass) until measure 2, where they begin to sing the lyrics. The organ part provides harmonic support throughout the system.

System 2: The vocal parts (Mean, Alto 1, Alto 2, Tenor, Bass) are in common time (indicated by a '4'). The organ part is in common time. The vocal parts enter at measure 6, singing the lyrics: "deep have I call ed to thee, O Lord, Lord, hear my voice,". The organ part continues to provide harmonic support.

Continuation of the musical score for "Out of the Deep" starting at measure 6.
