Introduction

The source material for Trio No. 2 was composed in sporadic intervals between Chile and the USA, between 2014 and 2019. The material at the opening of the first movement was originally intended for a Flute, Cello, and Piano work which would eventually become Entre Vientos y Cuerdas, and the theme of the dance movement sprung from an abandoned 2015 work for a mixed ensemble of double reeds and percussion. In addition to this primary material, a scrapped complete fourth and nearly complete fifth movement were also composed in 2019. Experimenting with ways to more consistently integrate material over longer time spans, the original fourth movement was meant to be a kind of development and recapitulation of the shorter first movement. The fifth was a fiery c-minor moto perpetuo derived from the rhythmic profile of the preceding material that, much like the first trio, closed with a culminative, energetic coda. In the end however, I felt that three movements struck the right duration, variety of material, proportion, and flow. Thus, the composition of Trio No. 2 was an exploration in which I attempted to find the limit of what material this instrumental combination could accept in this language, first expanding beyond, and then scaling back.

Given the first trio's warm reception, I was hesitant to return to this the genre; in the intervening years my work has proceeded on such wildly divergent paths that I wasn't sure that a return to this style would be a successful one. Yet in the end I am confident that this second trio is in every way more mature, well-crafted, and compelling than the first. It deals with more complex material in a more lucid and sustained way, explores its sound world a bit deeper, and integrates external styles into the language much more fluidly. Furthermore I think this work builds on what made the first trio successful; idiomatic instrumental writing in a transparent, vocal style; a colorful sonic palate with a rich variety of texture; and a propulsive, often multi-layered, rhythmic writing.

I am increasingly convinced that the Flute, Violin, and Cello trio may be the most perfectly reduced, economical "orchestra" in all chamber music. Like an orchestra, it contains a wide mix of timbral color, and uniform dynamic and technical facility throughout the extreme bass and treble registers. That the relative bareness of three solo instruments, compared to a Pierrot ensemble or double quintet, for example, effectively prevents the composer from cluttering the page with non-essential material, I see as yet another excellence of the medium. The Pierrot ensemble or double quintet are highly subject to their own nature. In the case of the Pierrot ensemble the sonic weight of the piano creates balance issues to be considered, and in the double quintet, with the winds outweigh the strings, the fundamental relationship between the instrumental groups is out of balance. So I find that in the trio, the absence of the piano places the three instruments in perfect equality to each other, with the 1:3 proportion of winds to strings placing a perfect balance between strings and winds, as in a true orchestra. And while I of course recognize that the trio is, undeniably, a chamber ensemble that subjects the material to its own peculiarities. But if we hold orchestral music as the aspirational ideal for composers wishing to express colorful, rich symphonic thought, I purport the trio to be perhaps a more apt miniature vessel of that thought than even solo piano music.

About this work

The first movement, as the title implies, is a kind of conversation between the instruments over a speech-like theme with an irregular rhythm and winding melodic curve. The violin and flute open the dialogue, each with their own interjections and contributing thoughts, leading towards a contrasting change of topic at letters C and D, which increase the pace, hinting at dance music, and leading towards the emphatic declarations that close the movement at G

The second movement starts with pentatonic, hemiola melody in a double period structure, repeating, then transitioning into a diminished double repetition of the material. A true development section starts at letter C, expanding on the material until letter F, which begins a canon of the theme in augmentation and diminution between flute and cello. From bar 189 the material liquidates, with a false transition at H leading into a development of the material from the first movement, with the noisy climax at 295 presenting material from both movements simultaneously in counterpoint. From bar 302 the material from the opening of the movement returns, altered from its journey, fizzling out till the end.

The third movement is noble and elegiac in character, a kind of theme and variations bookended by a pensive, melancholy adagio.

About the composer

Edgar Girtain (b. 1988) is originally from the United States. His formal training began at Ithaca college, and continued later at Rutgers University, where he earned a bachelor's degree in Music Education and a master's degree in Composition and Music Theory.

Between 2012 and 2016 he worked as a freelance musician around New York, teaching in public schools and holding an organist's post at an Episcopal Church in Allendale, New Jersey. In 2017 he relocated to Puerto Montt, Chile to teach at the private K-12 "American School."

Since 2019 he has been pursuing a PhD with David Felder at SUNY Buffalo while simultaneously directing the art department of the Universidad Austral de Chile's Puerto Montt Campus. Learn more at www.edgarfgirtainiv.com

Detailed description: This musical score is for a Trio in D minor, measures 93 to 105. It is written for three staves: Treble, Alto, and Bass. The key signature has two flats (B-flat and E-flat). The time signature is 3/4. The score begins at measure 93 with a 'rit.' (ritardando) marking and a key signature change to D minor (indicated by a 'D' and a key signature change). The first staff features a melodic line with slurs and a forte 'f' dynamic. The second and third staves provide harmonic support with a mix of 'pizz.' (pizzicato) and 'arco' (arco) textures, often using sixteenth-note patterns. The score is divided into four systems. The first system (measures 93-98) includes a 'rit.' marking and a key signature change to D minor. The second system (measures 99-101) continues the melodic and harmonic development. The third system (measures 102-104) maintains the alternating 'pizz.' and 'arco' textures. The fourth system (measures 105-108) introduces a 'p' (piano) dynamic and a 'cresc. poco a poco' (crescendo poco a poco) marking, leading to a final melodic flourish in the first staff.
