GENERELT FORORD

GENERAL PREFACE

The Carl Nielsen Edition is an independent project under the auspices of the Music Department of the Royal Library, launched in 1994 on the initiative of the Ministry of Culture and funded by the Ministry and the foundation Carl Nielsen og Anne Marie Carl-Nielsens Legat, with further financial support for the publication of the individual volumes from a number of other private foundations.

The edition is for both practical and scholarly use, and is based on critical editorial principles. It comprises all Carl Nielsen's finished works and completed individual pieces, and seeks as far as possible to reflect the works in the version last sanctioned by the composer. In cases where songs exist in several different arrangements by Carl Nielsen, all the versions are published.

Each work is furnished with an introduction which gives a brief account of the genesis of the work and its place in the composer's oeuvre, and a Critical Commentary including source description, editorial emendations and additions, and important alternative readings. The editorial material is published together with the music.

Works included in volumes with several independent works are also published in separate booklets. Part material is published for all the orchestral and chamber music works, and parts as well as piano score are published for the operas and the major choral works.

The edition is divided into the three main series Stage Music, Instrumental Music and Vocal Music, each further divided into volumes; within each genre the works are ordered chronologically.

Carl Nielsen Udgaven er et selvstændigt projekt under Det Kongelige Biblioteks Musikafdeling, iværksat i 1994 på Kulturministeriets foranledning og finansieret af Kulturministeriet og Carl Nielsen og Anne Marie Carl-Nielsens Legat, hvortil kommer støtte fra en række private fonde til udgivelse af de enkelte bind.

Udgaven er til såvel praktisk som videnskabelig brug, tilrettelagt efter kritisk-videnskabelige udgivelsesprincipper. Den omfatter samtlige Carl Nielsens afsluttede værker og enkeltsatser og søger i videst mulige omfang at afspejle værkerne i den af komponisten senest sanktionerede version. I tilfælde, hvor sange foreligger i flere forskellige arrangementer fra Carl Nielsens hånd, udgives alle versioner.

Hvert værk er forsynet med en indledning, der kort beskriver værkets tilblivelseshistorie og placerer det i den samlede produktion, samt en kritisk beretning, hvor der redegøres for kildesituationen, redaktionelle ændringer og tilføjelser og vigtige varianter. Den kritiske beretning udgives sammen med nodeteksten.

Værker, der indgår i bind med flere selvstændige værker, udgives også i separate hæfter. Til alle orkester- og kammermusikværker udgives stemmemateriale, og til operaerne og de større korværker udgives såvel stemmer som klaverpartitur.

Udgaven er opdelt i hovedserierne Scenemusik, Instrumentalmusik og Vokalmusik med tilhørende opdeling i enkeltbind; inden for hver genre er værkerne ordnet kronologisk.

Editorial principles

The music is reproduced with no typographical indications of editorial additions or emendations. These will be documented in the Critical Commentary. Typography, score disposition, genre names, and instrument names have been normalized in accordance with present-day practice. With a few exceptions, discussed in more detail in the Critical Commentary, the many additions and changes in Carl Nielsen's works that have been made by friends and colleagues have been removed.

Articulation, dynamics, ties and slurs, execution markings and playing instructions have been normalized on the basis of analogies between clearly parallel passages. All such completions are documented in the Critical Commentary. Obvious writing and printing errors have been tacitly corrected.

Carl Nielsen often notated horns and trumpets with key signatures. This practice has been normalized to a notation exclusively using accidentals.

Redaktionelle principper

Nodeteksten gengives uden typografisk markering af redaktionelle tilføjelser eller ændringer. Disse vil være dokumenteret i den kritiske beretning. Typografi, partituropstilling, instrument- og genrebetegnelser er normaliseret efter nutidig praksis. Med enkelte undtagelser, som der er gjort nærmere rede for i den kritiske beretning, er de mange tilføjelser og ændringer i Carl Nielsens værker, der er foretaget af venner og kolleger, fjernet.

Nodeteksten er normaliseret med hensyn til artikulation, dynamik, buer, foredragsbetegnelser og spilletekniske anvisninger således, at der er analogi mellem entydige parallelsteder. Alle sådanne kompletteringer dokumenteres i den kritiske beretning. Oplagte skrive- og trykfejl er stiltiende rettet.

Carl Nielsen noterede ofte horn og trompeter med faste fortegn. Denne praksis er normaliseret til notation udelukkende med løse fortegn.

1 John Fellow (udg.), Carl Nielsen til sin samtid, København 1999. Heri er ikke medtaget Carl Nielsens barndomserindringer, Min fynske Barndom.

"Muta in" in connection with the retuning of timpani and changes between two instruments (for example clarinet in A and B♭) have been tacitly normalized. This also applies to the combination of ties and slurs.

In Carl Nielsen's manuscripts the dynamic markings are sometimes rather carelessly placed, and this is also reflected in the early printed editions. This has been tacitly adjusted.

Clefs are normally given as in the main source.

Revised in 2001

"Muta in" i forbindelse med omstemning af pauker og skift mellem to instrumenter (f.eks. klarinet i A og B♭) er stiltiende normaliseret. Det samme gælder kombinationen af buer og bindebuer.

I Carl Nielsens manuskripter er de dynamiske angivelser undertiden placeret noget skødesløst, hvilket afspejler sig i de tidlige trykte udgaver. Dette er stiltiende justeret.

Nøgler gengives normalt som i hovedkilden.

PREFACE

It is hard to say precisely when Carl Nielsen began to work on his first symphony. No complete draft has been preserved, only rough drafts and sketches which give us an interesting insight into the process of composition. Carl Nielsen probably began the work as early as 1889-90. This is confirmed by among other things the fact that in the draft and sketches for the F minor quartet (op. 5), which was performed for the first time in Berlin in December 1890, there is a short motif which was later used in the G minor symphony.[1] Although Nielsen says in his diary in January 1891 that he has now begun on an andante "in D flat major for the symphony"[2] possibly corresponding to the D flat major second subject in the Allegro orgoglioso (b. 47), it was probably only when he had returned from his travels abroad in the summer of 1891 that the real work on the symphony was begun. In the late summer of 1892 he was in progress with the second movement, and in a letter to his wife, Anne Marie, he writes:

"The other day I composed a subject for the second section of the symphony. Have played it for Rosenhoff. He says it is the most beautiful thing I have written. Nor have I ever been as moved as on the night I wrote it. I had cold shivers up my spine and well nigh made myself ill with emotion. A. Gade heard what I [had] written of the symphony in the summer. He said that he could recognize my music with half an ear; no one in the kingdom of Denmark could invent my harmonies".[3]

It was in fact precisely this slow movement that audiences and reviewers found completely captivating.

A year later (1893) Johan Svendsen appears to have promised to perform the new work in the coming season,[4] and in a letter from Carl Nielsen to Anne Marie, the composer

Det er svært at afgøre præcis, hvornår Carl Nielsen begyndte at arbejde med sin første symfoni. Der findes ikke overleveret en fuldstændig kladde, men kun udkast og skitser, som giver et interessant indblik i kompositionsprocessen. Sandsynligvis begyndte Carl Nielsen på arbejdet allerede i 1889-90. Dette bekræftes blandt andet af, at der i kladde og skitser til f-mol kvartetten (op. 5), som blev opført første gang i Berlin i december 1890, findes et kort motiv, der senere blev anvendt i g-mol symfonien.[1] Skønt Nielsen i sin dagbog i januar 1891 fortæller, at han nu var begyndt på en andante "i Des dur til Symfonien"[2] muligvis svarende til Des-dur sidetemaet i Allegro orgoglioso (t. 47), var det sandsynligvis først, da han var vendt tilbage fra udenlandsrejsen i sommeren 1891, at det egentlige arbejde med symfonien for alvor blev påbegyndt. I sensommeren 1892 var han i gang med anden sats, og i et brev til sin hustru Anne Marie skriver han:

"Jeg har forleden komponeret et Thema til anden Afdeling af Symfonien. Har spillet det for Rosenhoff. Han siger, det er det smukkeste jeg har skrevet. Jeg har heller aldrig været saa bevæget som den Nat, jeg skrev det. Det løb mig koldt ned ad Ryggen, og jeg var lige ved at blive helt syg af Bevægelse. Det jeg [har] skrevet i Sommer af Symfonien hørte A. Gade. Han sagde at han vilde kunde kjende min Musik med et halvt Øre, ingen i Danmarks Rige kunde finde paa mine Harmonier".[3]

Det var i øvrigt netop denne langsomme sats, som publikum og anmeldere fandt aldeles betagende.

Et år senere (1893) har Johan Svendsen tilsyneladende givet tilsagn om at ville opføre det nye værk i den kommende sæson,[4] og i et brev fra Carl Nielsen til Anne Marie reveals how the work is progressing.[5] He writes that he is working on the Finale and has had to reject the old second subject, which was apparently too much like one of the songs from Viser og Vers af J.P. Jacobsen, which had been performed in the spring of that year;[6] he thought it "too slender for the first motif". Despite heart problems that had arisen during the move to Frederiksgade 5 in the autumn of 1893 and a resulting stay in hospital of 20 days, in December Carl Nielsen was able to finish the fair copy of the first three movements, while the fair copy of the Finale was only finished in mid-January of the new year.[7]

The symphony had its first performance on 14th March 1894 at "the Koncertpalæ by the whole Royal Orchestra and the best musicians outside the Orchestra under the baton of Johan Svendsen", as he proudly writes in his diary.[8] According to the programme the first and second movement had the respective tempo designations Allegro ed orgoglioso and Andante sostenuto,[9] while the third movement had Allegro piacevole (non è Scherzo), although in the sketches the composer had in fact called it a "Scherzo"; the fourth movement had the tempo marking Allegro appassionata.[10] Once the work had been printed the designations had been changed to Allegro orgoglioso, Andante, Allegro comodo and Allegro con fuoco. At the same concert Otto Malling's new orchestral suite Orientalske Scener op. 51[11] was also performed, as well as Brahms' Violin Concerto op. 77; the concert ended with the Prelude to Wagner's opera Die Meistersinger. Although on the same day there had been an advance newspaper report on Carl Nielsen in Politiken[12] strongly urging people to go to the event, it was far from sold out, and this was noted by several reviewers.[13] The most laudatory, enthusiastic and poetic review was Politiken's, written by Charles Kjerulf:[14]

afslører komponisten, hvordan arbejdet skrider frem.[5] Han fortæller, at han er i gang med Finalen og har måttet kassere det gamle sidetema, som åbenbart minder for meget om en af sangene fra Viser og Vers af J. P. Jacobsen, der var blevet opført foråret samme år;[6] han syntes, at det stod "for spinkelt til det første Motiv". På trods af problemer med hjertet, som var opstået under flytningen til Frederiksgade 5 i efteråret 1893 og deraf følgende hospitalsindlæggelse i 20 dage, nåede Carl Nielsen i december måned at blive færdig med renskriften til de første tre satser, mens renskriften af Finalen først blev afsluttet midt i januar i det nye år.[7]

Symfonien fik sin førsteopførelse den 14. marts 1894 i "Concertpalaiet af det hele kgl Kapel og de bedste Musikere udenfor Kapellet under Direktion af Johan Svendsen", som han stolt skriver i sin dagbog.[8] Ifølge programmet havde første og anden sats henholdsvis tempobetegnelserne Allegro ed orgoglioso og Andante sostenuto,[9] mens tredjesatsen havde Allegro piacevole (non è Scherzo), skønt komponisten i skitserne netop kaldte den for "Scherzo"; fjerde sats havde tempobetegnelsen Allegro appassionata.[10] Da værket forelå trykt var betegnelserne ændret til Allegro orgoglioso, Andante, Allegro comodo og Allegro con fuoco. Ved samme koncert opførtes også Otto Mallings nye orkestersuite Orientalske Scener op. 51[11] og Brahms' violinkoncert op. 77; koncerten afsluttedes med forspillet til Wagners opera Mestersangerne. Skønt der den samme dag havde været en jounalistisk foromtale af Carl Nielsen i Politiken,[12] som kraftigt opfordrede folk til at gå til begivenheden, var der dog langt fra udsolgt, hvilket bemærkedes af flere anmeldere.[13] Den mest rosende, begejstrede og poetiske anmeldelse var Politikens, skrevet af Charles Kjerulf:[14]

"From the first to the last note this work engages ear and mind equally. And yet — not in the sense that there is any breakthrough — that all Carl Nielsen's powers are here at once crystallized in fixed forms, blocks and bricks of notes, from which with a firm hand and assured architecture an enduring edifice rises.

What this symphony or just this music 'represents' or 'is supposed to mean', no one, perhaps least of all Carl Nielsen himself, is likely to say. At all events it 'represents' no more than a painting with sea and air alone, but for all that this is also more than enough.

In this music there are the finest effects of light — cloud shadows hastening over flowing water. The sun breaks forth and the sun hides. Waves tower up and subside again. There are the eternally shifting moods of an easily moved human mind, from tears to smiles, from weeping to laughter. Eyes sparkle and eyes become dewy, the heart beats with joy and is crushed by torment. And all this is given enchanting expression in music, bold and yet undemonstrative, flashy and yet refined.

This symphony is a whole marvellous and captivating series of moods, so airy and easily flowing that one almost thinks the mere generic designation is a burden upon it. A work from which there already flashes a summer lightning of talent and which seems to promise a coming storm of genius.

Unquiet and ruthless in harmony and modulation, yet all so wonderfully innocent and unconscious, as if one saw a child play with dynamite. And what is most important: genuine and with no pretence whatsoever from start to finish, an accurate and faithful expression of this quite distinct, unusual young artistic personality.

Quite captivating was the second movement, an Andante sostenuto, as quiet and dreaming as the scent of clover. It was also heard with that indescribable awe which far more clearly than loud applause spread the confirmed opinion over the whole hall; none of our young composers had hitherto written such a valuable and significant piece of new music as this [...]

But both in the introductory movement, an Allegro which rightly bore the designation 'proud' and in a whimsically formed third movement, Allegro piacevole, which the designation explicitly protected from being perceived as a Scherzo, and then in a Finale appassionata, there was so much spirit and power, so much new and distinctive, fine and fertile, that no one could be in any doubt that Carl Nielsen has here, in the most beautiful and convincing way, honoured the many great promises of the past.

"Fra første til sidste Node fanger dette Arbejde i lige høj Grad Øre og Sind. Og dog — ikke paa den Maade, at der finder et Gennembrud Sted — at alle Carl Nielsens Ævner her med ét Slag krystalliseres i faste Former, Tone-Blokke og Kvadre, hvoraf der med fast Haand og arkitektonisk sikkert rejser sig en varig Bygning.

Hvad denne Symfoni eller blot denne Musik 'forestiller' eller 'skal betyde', siger næppe Nogen, maaske aller mindst Carl Nielsen selv. I hvert Fald 'forestiller' den ikke mere end et Maleri med Hav og Luft alene, men dette er for dens Sags Skyld jo ogsaa mere end nok.

Der er i denne Musik de fineste Lysvirkninger — ilende Skygger af Skyer over glidende Vand. Sol bryder frem og Sol skjuler sig, Bølger taarner sig og glatter sig atter ud. Der er et let bevægeligt Menneskesinds evindeligt skiftende Stemninger, fra Taarer til Smil, fra Graad til Latter. Øjne tindrer og Øjne dugges, Hjærtet banker i Fryd og knuges i Vaande. Og alt faar det et henrivende Udtryk i Toner, dristigt og dog stilfærdigt, grelt og dog fint.

En hel forunderlig og betagende Stemningsrække er denne Symfoni, saa luftig og lethenglidende, at man næsten synes den blotte Artsbetegnelse tynger den. Et Arbejde, fra hvilket der allerede udgaaar en Kornmodsglans af Talent, og som synes at forjætte et kommende Uvejr af Geni.

Uroligt og hensynsløst i Harmoni og Modulation, men altsammen dog saa forunderlig uskyldigt og ubevidst, som saa man et Barn lege med Dynamit. Og det allervigtigste: ægte og uden nogetsomhelst Skaberi fra først til sidst, et nøjagtigt og fuldtro Udtryk for denne ganske egne, usædvanlige unge Kunstnerpersonlighed.

Helt betagende var anden Sats, en Andante sostenuto, saa stille og drømmende som Kløverduft. Den paahørtes da ogsaa med hin Ubeskrivelige Andagt, der langt tydeligere end larmende Applavs bredte den sikre Mening over hele Salen: ingen af vore Unge har endnu skrevet et saa værdifuldt og betydeligt Stykke ny Musik som dette [...]

Men baade i Indledningssatsen, en Allegro, der med Rette bar Betegnelsen 'stolt' og i en lunefuldt formet tredje Sats Allegro piacevole, som Betegnelsen udtrykkelig værnede mod at opfattes som en Scherzo — endelig i en Finale appasionata var der saa megen Aand og Ævne, saa meget nyt og ejendommeligt, fint og frodigt, at Ingen kunde være i Tvivl om, Carl Nielsen her paa den skønneste og mest overbevisende Maade havde indfriet de mange store Løfter fra tidligere.

And when this, his G minor symphony, ended so naturally and straightforwardly, as if there was no grain of defiance, in a bright C major chord, the applause thundered out, and the youthful composer, from his modest second violin desk, had to come forward a whole three times to the side of the radiantly happy Johan Svendsen to thank the audience personally for the enthusiastic acclaim. Such a feelingful concert moment is something one only experiences at intervals of many years [...]"[15]

The quotation suggests that the frequent claim that Charles Kjerulf was extremely critical of Carl Nielsen's compositions until he heard the performance of the Fourth Symphony in 1916 must be reconsidered.[16] There can be no doubt that Kjerulf was also enchanted by the First Symphony.[17]

Other newspaper reviewers expressed the same enthusiasm. Robert Henriques of Dannebrog even illustrated his review with music examples, suggesting that he may have had access to the fair copy.[18] Common to quite a few of the articles is the fact that they find the motifs of the first movement "a little breathless",[19] or that they suffer from "a certain shortness of breath",[20] which shows that even in the First Symphony Carl Nielsen's style deviates from the more Lied-like themes of many Romantic composers. The second movement appears to have been the one that aroused most attention, while the third movement seems to have been perceived as less personal and more lustreless. The most critical views were expressed in Angul Hammerich's review in Dagbladet.[21] After a longish, perhaps slightly sarcastic preamble, Hammerich comments first on the applause, then on the music:

"Thus it is to be hoped, now that the beginning has been made, that it may be a true beginning, and will not come to a halt with a single attempt [...] The success yesterday evening was a foregone conclusion. The young symphonist Mr. Carl Nielsen took no fewer than three calls, Mr. F. Hilmer the same honour twice, the conductor Johan Svendsen similarly the same honour several times, seasoned with fanfares and orchestral

Og da denne hans G-Moll Symfoni saa naturligt og ligefremt, som var her ikke Gran af Trods til Stede endte, med en lysende C-dur Akkord, bragede Bifaldet løs, og den ungdommelige Komponist maatte fra sin beskedne Sekund-Violin-Pult hele tre Gange frem ved den straalende glade Johan Svendsens Side for personlig at takke for den begejstrede Hyldest. Saa stemningsfuldt et Koncert-Øjeblik oplever man kun med mange Aars Mellemrum [...]"[15]

Citatet tyder på, at den ofte fremsatte påstand om, at Charles Kjerluf var yderst kritisk over for Carl Nielsens kompositioner, indtil han hørte opførelsen af den fjerde symfoni i 1916, må revideres.[16] Der kan ikke herske tvivl om, at Kjerulf også var betaget af den første symfoni.[17]

Andre avisanmeldere udtrykte samme begejstring. Robert Henriques fra Dannebrog illustrerede endda sin anmeldelse med musikeksempler, som tyder på, at han må have haft adgang til renskriften.[18] Fælles for en del af artiklerne er, at de finder førstesatsens motiver "lidt stakaandede",[19] eller at de lider af "en vis Kortaandethed",[20] hvilket viser, at Carl Nielsens stil allerede i den første symfoni adskiller sig fra mange romantiske komponisters mere liedprægede temaer. Andensatsen er tilsyneladende den, der vækker mest opsigt, mens tredjesatsen til gengæld virker mindre personlig og mere mat. De mest kritiske udsagn kommer til udtryk i Angul Hammerich's anmeldelse i Dagbladet.[21] Efter en længere, måske lidt sarkastisk indledning bemærker Hammerich først om applausen, dernæst om musikken:

"Altsaa staaer det til at haabe, nu da Begyndelsen er gjort, at det maa blive en virkelig Begyndelse, ikke blive staaende ved et enkelt Forsøg [...] Sukces'en var i Aftes en given Sag. Den unge Symfoniker Hr. Carl Nielsen blev fremkaldt ikke mindre end tre Gange. Hr. Fr Hilmer med samme Ære to Gange, Kapelmester Johan Svendsen ligeledes samme Ære flere Gange, tilsat med Fanfarer og Orkestertouche, og det maa formodes, at om man flourishes, and we must suppose that if Otto Malling and Richard Wagner had been at hand, they would not have been spared either [....] The actual content of the concert can be dealt with briefly. Mr. Carl Nielsen had the honour of making his debut at this place with a new symphony. It has been written with a decidedly radical tendency, somewhat in the style of César Franck's things.[22] What it otherwise adds or does not add, it would be impossible to have any opinion about, without looking at it in much more detail. At first glance one notes a number of effective ascents, well adapted closes, which attune the restless content to harmonically functioning cadences, and further many peculiarities and non-significant motifs.

Whether it is artistic imagination or constructed combinations that have the upper hand cannot be immediately determined. The young composer still owes us something that captivates directly, captivates musically, on its own account. If this is present, then of course the musical-aesthetic credo is a matter of complete indifference. If only we feel there is 'music' in it, both radicalism and conservatism may be permitted to stand on their merits and have their justification. In the case of Mr. Carl Nielsen we still await this 'something'. That he seeks out and seeks far, and goes his own way, are always good signs".[23]

For the occasion the string section of the orchestra seems to have been expanded to almost twice the normal size. It was particularly noted that the extended orchestra created manifest problems of balance in parts of the programme, especially between soloist and orchestra in Brahms' Violin Concerto. According to Hammerich the concert was "not a musical evening that came up to expectations"; the cause

"lay in the selection of the programme, which lacked sufficient relief and which had a fatiguing uniformity, because almost all of it was orientated towards precisely the same thing: noisy orchestral effects, or if one prefers, effectful orchestral noise [...]

The impression on Wednesday was in all essentials simple: noise. In some places the row kicked up was almost incredible — which of course has its place and its absolute justification in an orchestra, but which just as evidently is dangerous to use as the most important factor throughout a havde havt Otto Malling og Richard Wagner ved Haanden, var de heller ikke blevne sparede. [...] Selve Koncertens Indhold kan omhandles i Korthed. Hr. Carl Nielsen havde Æren af at debutere paa dette Sted med en ny Symfoni. Den er skrevet i udpræget radikal Retning, noget i Stil med Cesar Franchs Ting.[22] Hvad den iøvrig bringer eller ikke bringer vil man umuligt kunne have nogen Mening om uden at se meget nærmere paa den. Ved første Syn konstaterer man en Del effektfulde Stigninger, vel tilpassede Udgange, der stemmer det urolige Indhold til harmonisk virkende Afslutninger, fremdeles mange Særheder og ikke betydelige Motiver.

Om det er kunstnerisk Fantasi eller konstruktive Kombinationer, der have Overtaget, kan ikke strax afgjøres. Den unge Komponist skylder os endnu noget af det, der tager umiddelbart, tager musikalsk, for sin egen Skyld. Er dette til Stede, er selvfølgelig den musikalsk-æsthetiske Trosbekjendelse ganske ligegyldig. Mærke vi blot, at der er 'Musik' i det, skal baade Radikalisme og Konservatisme faae Lov til at staa ved sit Værd og have sin Ret. For Hr. Carl Nielsens Vedkommende vente vi endnu paa dette 'Noget'. At han søger ud og søger langt, gaaer sine egne Veie, er altid gode Tegn".[23]

Til lejligheden var orkestrets strygergruppe tilsyneladende blevet udvidet til næsten det dobbelte. Det bemærkedes især, at det udvidede orkester skabte åbenbare balanceproblemer i dele af programmet, specielt mellem solist og orkester i Brahms' violinkoncert. Ifølge Hammerich var "Koncerten ikke en Musikaften, der stod paa Høide med Forventningerne"; årsagen

"laa i Programvalget, som var uden tilstrækkelig Relief og som virkede trættende ensformigt, fordi det saa omtrent Altsammen var anlagt paa netop det Samme: larmende Orkestereffekter, eller om man heller vil, effektfuld Orkesterlarm [...]

Indtrykket i Onsdags var væsentligt enkelt: Larm. Det var paa sine Steder næsten utroligt, det Spektakel, der blev leveret, noget, der selvfølgelig hører til og har sin absolute Berettigelse i et Orkester, men som det ligesaa selvfølgelig er

22 Carl Nielsen fremhæver selv betydningen af César Franck i et selvbiografisk brev til William Behrend, 11.3.1895 (DK-Kk, NKS 5155, 4°, dog måske inspireret af Hammerichs anmeldelse?).

whole evening [...] True, the achievement was not wholly the orchestra's own. It had been so reinforced by alien elements that the orchestra was not far from being doubled — it had been composed in proportions appropriate to 8 cellos and 8 double-basses (the Royal Orchestra as such musters only half of this strength)".[24]

There is nothing in the reviews, however, to suggest that the extended string section was a handicap for Carl Nielsen's first symphony.

After the successful premiere came the work of getting the symphony printed. Proofs now had to be read of Carl Nielsen's fair copy, from which Johan Svendsen had probably conducted[25] — a job the composer himself did, although probably with help from Orla Rosenhoff,[26] from whom he often sought guidance. Thus errors were corrected, details added and changed, especially in the final movement.[27] In July 1894 the plates had been engraved,[28] but it was not until the end of August that Carl Nielsen received a first impression of the plates that he could proof-read; the parcel had for some reason been delayed in the post.[29] Although the composer mentions that he is "sitting working with the symphony up to [his] ears",[30] there were still a number of errors that escaped his eye and appeared in the edition. No later than the end of September the work was ready and printed,[31] and in mid-October Carl Nielsen went to Germany, to among other places Berlin, where along with Alfred Wilhelm Hansen[32] he tried to arouse people's interest in his most recent works:

farligt at anvende som den væsentligste Faktor en hel Aften igjennem [...] Ganske vist, Præstationen var ikke helt Kapellets egen. Det var blevet saa forstærket med fremmede Elementer, at Orkestret ikke langt fra var fordoblet — det var sammensat efter Forholdet som til 8 Violonceller og 8 Kontrabasser (det kgl. Kapel tæller selv kun Halvdelen af denne Styrke)".[24]

Der er dog intet i anmeldelserne, der tyder på, at den udvidede strygerbesætning har været en hæmsko for Carl Nielsens første symfoni.

Efter den vellykkede premiere kom arbejdet med at få symfonien trykt. Der skulle nu læses korrektur på Carl Nielsens renskrift, som Johan Svendsen sandsynligvis havde anvendt til at dirigere efter[25] — et arbejde komponisten selv foretog, dog formodentlig med hjælp fra Orla Rosenhoff,[26] hos hvem han ofte søgte vejledning. Således blev der rettet fejl, tilføjet og ændret i detaljerne, specielt i Finalen.[27] I juli 1894 var pladerne færdigstukket,[28] men først i slutningen af august modtog Carl Nielsen et førstetryk af pladerne, som han kunne læse korrektur på; forsendelsen var af en eller anden grund blevet forsinket i posten.[29] På trods af at komponisten nævner, at han "sidder i Arbejde med Symfonien til op over Ørerne",[30] var der dog alligevel en del fejl, som undgik hans blik og kom med i udgaven. Senest ved udgangen af september var værket klar og færdigtrykt,[31] og i midten af oktober rejste Carl Nielsen til Tyskland, blandt andet til Berlin hvor han sammen med Alfred Wilhelm Hansen[32] forsøgte at gøre folk interesseret i sine nyeste værker:

"In Berlin Wilh: Hansen introduced me to the formerly so well known Paganini player Friedberg [...] he promised to do something for my quartet and symphony [...] On Wednesday (in Leipzig) Wilh: Hansen was with the publisher of 'Musikalisches Wochenblatt', Fritsche, whom he got to write about my symphony very soon".[33]

And on 27th October 1894 he wrote further to Anne Marie about the project:

"What has been done for my symphony is the following. Wilh: Hansen was with Lessmann and he will talk to Weingartner, and there will be an article in his periodical too about the symphony and me by William Berend, whom Lessmann knows personally. I met an old friend of Hansen's, the conductor Friedberg; he promised Hansen and me, indeed warmly made the offer himself, that he would talk to Grünfeldt, Moskowski and several influential musicians[.] Moskovskie is Mannstaedt's best friend and would talk to him. I have been to see Mannstaedt, sent the symphony and a letter, and the young Swedish composer[34] who admires my things sees him now and then and will also talk about me.

In 'Musikalisches Wochenblatt' the symphony will be reviewed when Hansen sends it.

Nicodè will let me know about it when I come back to Dresden. Yesterday he and I played it through, but so far he understands not a jot of it, for him it was like some wholly foreign language, he said, but he will take a thorough look at it.[35] — I am not too keen as far as William Berend is concerned.[36] I have told Hansen that Rosenhoff should help him [i.e. Behrend], and have written to R. and asked him".[37]

35 In another letter to Anne Marie written on the same day Carl Nielsen explains the meeting with Nicodé as follows: "Today I was with Nicodè, to whom I had taken my symphony yesterday. He received me with great amiability and, as well as could be done, we played through the first two movements of my work. He said that he could hear well enough that it was a talented work; but he did not yet understand much of the content and it was for him as if my music spoke a foreign language". Og den 27. oktober 1894 skriver han videre til Anne Marie om projektet:

"Hvad der er udrettet for min Symfoni er følgende. Wilh: Hansen var hos Lessmann og han vil tale med Weingartner og desuden kommer der en Artikel i hans Blad om Symfonien og mig af William Berend som Lessmann kjender personlig. En gammel Ven af Hansens, Kapelmester Friedberg traf jeg, han lovede Hansen og mig, ja tilbød det med Varme selv, at han vilde tale med Grünfeldt, Moskowski, og flere formaaende Musikere[.] Moskovskie er Mannstaedt's bedste Ven og skulde saa tale med ham. Mannstaedt har jeg været hos, sendt Symfonien og Brev og den unge svenske Komponist[34] som beundrer mine Ting kommer sammen med ham af og til og vil ogsaa tale om mig.

Nicodè vil sige mig Besked naar jeg kommer tilbage til Dresden. Igaar spillede han og jeg den igjennem, men han forstod foreløbig ikke et Muk af den, det var ham som et aldeles fremmed Sprog, sagde han men vil se grundig paa den.[35] — Jeg er ikke videre for William Berend.[36] Jeg har sagt til Hansen at Rosenhoff skal hjælpe ham, og har skrevet til R. og bedt ham derom".[37]

35 I et andet brev til Anne Marie skrevet den samme dag forklarer Carl Nielsen mødet med Nicodé således: "Idag var jeg hos Nicodè, som jeg igaar havde bragt min Symfoni. Han modtog mig overordentligt elskværdigt og vi spillede, saa godt det lod sig gjøre, de to første Satser af mit Arbejde igjennem. Han sagde, at han godt kunde høre det var et talentfuldt Værk; men han forstod endnu ikke meget af Indholdet og det var ham som om min Musik talte i et fremmed Sprog". Rosenhoff reacted promptly to the request from his pupil Carl Nielsen to write an article in collaboration with William Behrend, which could then be translated into German and appear in a German periodical as an indication of what was thought about the young Danish composer abroad. He certainly did not care for Carl Nielsen's determined attempt at self-promotion; at all events he would have no part of it:

"You know my distaste for anything that reeks of advertising. For myself I have never advertised, and I confess that it would be difficult for me, not to say downright impossible to engage in the like for you.

You will certainly remember that, when the 28-year-old N.W. Gade aroused the enthusiasm of the Leipzigers, a German editor and musician — Robert Schumann by name — wrote an understanding article about the young Danish composer; there was a point in this. But for me and W. Behrend to do an article at your request for a German periodical, so that the same article can later appear in Danish newspapers as a true expression of what is thought in Germany about the composer Carl Nielsen — no, my dear friend, would not that stick in your own throat? — I cannot conceive it is possible that you would misunderstand these lines. For you know that you have my most earnest sympathy, and you know that I have the brightest and greatest expectations of you as a composer, but spare me.....the right man will find a way in — just give it time!!!

Cordial greetings, more next time".[38]

At the beginning of November 1894 Carl Nielsen was in Vienna, where he met Brahms and among other things presented him with a copy of the symphony.[39] Unfortunately Brahms apparently never gave any indication of what he thought about the young Danish composer's work.

However, that the work was printed was not enough to make it well known and performed. Carl Nielsen's very determined promotion was presumably the most important reason why the symphony was performed several times in Germany over the next few years. Although Jean Louis Nicodé[40] does not seem to have understood much of the work, he did show so much interest in it that Carl Nielsen was allowed to Rosenhoff reagerede prompte på anmodningen fra sin elev Carl Nielsen om at skrive en artikel i samarbejde med William Behrend, som derefter kunne oversættes til tysk og udkomme i et tysk tidsskrift som et udtryk for, hvad man mente om den unge danske komponist i udlandet. Han syntes bestemt ikke om Carl Nielsens ihærdige forsøg på selvpromovering; i det mindste ville han ikke medvirke:

"De kjender min Uvilje over for alt hvad der smager af Reklame. For mig selv har jeg aldrig reklameret, og jeg tilstaar, at det vil falde mig svært, for ikke at sige plat umuligt at være med til sligt for Dem.

De husker sagtens, at, da den 28 aarige N.W. Gade begejstrede Leipzigerne, skrev en tysk Redaktør og Musiker — Robert Schumann ved Navn, en forstående Artikel om den danske unge Komponist; heri var der god Mening. Men at W. Behrend og jeg paa Opfordring af Dem laver en Artikel til et tysk Blad, for at samme Artikel senere kan gaa over i danske Aviser som et sandt Udtryk for, hvad man i Tyskland siger og mener om Komponisten Carl Nielsen — Nej, kjære Ven, er det Dem ikke selv en vel drøj Mundfuld? — Jeg kan ikke tænke mig den Mulighed, at De misforstaar disse Linjer. For De ved jo, at for Dem føler jeg med dyb Alvor, og De ved, at jeg bærer de lyseste og største Forhaabninger til Dem som Komponist, men skaan mig.....den rette Mand kommer nok derind — giv blot Tid!!!

Hjertelig Hilsen, mere næste Gang".[38]

I begyndelsen af november 1894 var Carl Nielsen i Wien, hvor han mødte Brahms og blandt andet forærede ham et eksemplar af symfonien.[39] Desværre har Brahms tilsyneladende aldrig givet udtryk for, hvad han mente om den unge danske komponists arbejde.

At værket forelå trykt var dog ikke nok til få det kendt og opført. Carl Nielsens meget ihærdige promovering må formodentlig have være den vigtigste årsag til, at symfonien i de kommende år blev opført flere gange i Tyskland. Selv om Jean Louis Nicodé[40] åbenbart ikke forstod meget af værket, viste han dog så meget interesse for det, at Carl Nielsen fik lov til at dirigere symfonien ved den femte orkesterkoncert, som Nicodé conduct the symphony at the first orchestral concert that Nicodé held in Dresden on 18th March 1896.[41] On this occasion Nielsen changed the tempo markings slightly: the Allegro orgoglioso of the first movement was changed to Allegro moderato, perhaps because at least one Danish reviewer had recommended the composer to find another designation than the rather peculiar "orgoglioso".[42] The Allegro comodo of the third movement had the bracketed specification "(non è Scherzo)" added, as also indicated in the programme from the premiere, but not in the recently printed score. This may also have been because some newspaper reviews had spoken of the movement as a Scherzo, which the composer wanted to emphasize that it was not. According to Carl Nielsen it was not as great a success in Dresden as it had been in Copenhagen; all the same, he listed the number of times he had been called up to the stage. He was further convinced that the symphony's "concise form and precise mode of expression [...] both amazed and appealed to people", and that "such a piece will be able to do some good and open ears and eyes to all the German gravy and fat among Wagner's imitators".[43] About a week later the work seems to have been performed in Chemnitz, perhaps even by the same orchestra, and according to Nationaltidende Arthur Nikisch[44] wanted to try to get the work performed in Leipzig.[45]

41 Programme in DK-Kk, CNA I.E.b.1.

42 Berlingske Tidende, 15.3.1894: "The first Allegro, which has the (to us unfamiliar) designation orgoglioso, which we may hope will be replaced by another [...]". In an essay in Tilskueren (January 1909; reprinted in Levende Musik, Copenhagen 1925), Carl Nielsen writes the following: "A composer here had written a symphony whose first allegro movement had the Italian adjective orgoglioso (proud) as its characterization — that is, Allegro orgoglioso. After the first performance of the symphony the composer was congratulated by an older, distinguished and truly very intelligent lady who confessed that it had above all been the first movement that had aroused her enthusiasm because she had constantly thought she could clearly hear the organ-like aspect the composer had wanted to express". 45 Nationaltidende, 26.3.1896: "Carl Nielsen's G minor symphony, performed on Wednesday at the Nicodé concert in Dresden, will be played in a week's time in Chemnitz under the baton of the conductor Pohle, and Arthur Nikisch will probably put it on in Leipzig". According to the programme of the concert in Dresden the work was performed by "Die Chemnitzer Städtische Kapelle" (DK-Kk, CNA I.E.b.1); Chemnitz is also mentioned in Gerhardt Lynge, Danske Komponister i det 20. Aarhundredes Begyndelse, Copenhagen 1917 (2nd edn.), p. 219. In 1898 the work was to have been played in Mühlhausen, conducted by the composer at a music festival, but this event probably came to nothing, cf. John Fellow, op. cit., p. 686.

afholdt i Dresden den 18. marts 1896.[41] Ved denne lejlighed ændrede Nielsen lidt på tempobetegnelserne: førstesatsens Allegro orgoglioso blev således ændret til Allegro moderato, måske fordi mindst én dansk anmelder havde anbefalet komponisten at finde en anden betegnelse end den lidt specielle "orgoglioso".[42] Tredjesatsens Allegro comodo har fået tilføjet den specificerende parentes "(non è Scherzo)", som også er angivet i programmet fra premieren, men ikke i det trykte partitur. Dette kan ligeledes være foranlediget af, at nogle avisanmeldelser havde omtalt satsen som en Scherzo, hvilket komponisten ønskede at understrege, at den ikke var. Ifølge Carl Nielsen var succesen ikke så stor i Dresden, som den havde været i København, men han opregnede alligevel hvor mange gange, han var blevet fremkaldt på scenen. Desuden var han overbevist om, at symfoniens "knappe Form og præcise Udtryksmaade [...] paa engang forbløffede og tiltalte Folk", og at "et saadant Stykke vil kunne udrette noget godt og lukke Ørene og Øjnene op for al den tyske Sauce og Fedme som findes hos Vagners Efterabere".[43] Omkring en uge senere blev værket tilsyneladende opført i Chemnitz måske endda af samme orkester, og ifølge Nationaltidende ville Arthur Nikisch[44] forsøge at få værket opført i Leipzig.[45]

I et essay i Tilskueren (januar 1909; genoptrykt i Levende Musik, København 1925), skriver Carl Nielsen følgende: "En herværende Komponist havde skrevet en Symfoni, hvis første Allegrosats havde det italienske Tillægsord orgoglioso (stolt) som Karakterbetegnelse, altsaa: Allegro orgoglioso. Efter den første Opførelse af Symfonien blev Komponisten lykønsket af en ældre, fornem og virkelig meget intelligent Dame, der tilstod, at det dog især var første Sats, som havde begejstret hende, fordi hun hele Tiden syntes tydeligt at kunne høre det orgelagtige, Komponisten havde villet udtrykke". Ifølge programmet for koncerten i Dresden opførtes værket af "Die Chemnitzer Städtische Kapelle"(DK-Kk, CNA I.E.b.1); Chemnitz nævnes også i Gerhardt Lynge, Danske Komponister i det 20. Aarhundredes Begyndelse, København 1917 (2. udg.), s. 219. I 1898 skulle værket have været spillet i Mühlhausen under komponistens ledelse til en musikfest, men denne begivenhed blev formodentlig ikke til noget, jf. John Fellow, op. cit., s. 686.

In Denmark too the work was performed several times over the next few years, for example at the Palækoncert on 7th February 1897, where the tempo designations were the same as at the premiere,[46] and on 10th August 1901 in Tivoli. In Sweden the symphony had its first performance in Gothenburg in 1910, conducted by Wilhelm Stenhammar.[47] In that connection Carl Nielsen wrote to the Swedish conductor:

"Through Mr. Wilh: Hansen we learn that you will play my first symphony at one of your concerts in Gothenburg. May I be permitted to express my heartfelt thanks for your interest in this work, which now lies far back in time and in my output, but which has always remained close to my heart because it is very individually felt, indeed in reality far too individually for a symphony. What may perhaps be good in a piece of intimate chamber music becomes a mistake in a symphony; I can see that well, but for that very reason I am pleased when it comes into the hands of an artist who can disregard the weak and far too lyrical aspects of the work and who has power over his audience; for it is certain that this symphony would fall completely to the ground even in a flawless performance if the conductor were not in personal sympathy with his audience.

May we be permitted to make the following remarks: In the 1st movement Page 14 the Assai piu vivo is very palpable [the present edition, bar 69]. At Page 19-20 the chromatic motion in Clar: and Fag: should be as calm, snaky-smooth as possible [bars 107-111].

In the 3rd at Letter A (Page 81) [bar 31] it should say piu vivo, which applies until Page 83 Bar 2 [bar 43], and then again four bars piu vivo and so on".[48]

Wilhelm Stenhammar does not appear to have taken note of Carl Nielsen's instructions, since the note is not added to the set of parts that was used in Gothenburg in 1910. That the remark più mosso (third movement, b. 31) is nevertheless added in some of the parts is probably due to the fact that Carl Nielsen's son-in-law Emil Telmányi[49] conducted the symphony in December 1925 and on that occasion carried out a somewhat extensive, but not stringent, adaptation of the part material.[50]

Også i Danmark blev værket opført flere gange i de kommende år, således ved Palækoncerten den 7. februar 1897, hvor tempobetegnelserne var de samme som til premieren,[46] og den 10. august 1901 i Tivoli. I Sverige fik symfonien sin førsteopførelse i Göteborg 1910 dirigeret af Wilhelm Stenhammar.[47] I den forbindelse skrev Carl Nielsen til den svenske dirigent:

"Gjennem Hr. Wilh: Hansen erfarer vi at De vil spille min første Symfoni ved en af Deres Concerter i Göteborg. Maa jeg have Lov at bringe Dem min hjertelige Tak for Deres Interesse for dette Arbejde, som jo ligger mange Aar tilbage i Tiden og min Produktion, men som altid har ligget mit Hjerte nært fordi det er meget individuelt følt, ja, i Virkeligheden altfor individuelt af en Symfoni at være. Det som maaske kan være godt i et Stykke intimt Kammermusik bliver en Fejl i en Symfoni, det ser jeg godt, men derfor er jeg glad naar det kommer i en Kunstners Haand, der kan se bort fra det svage og altfor lyriske i Værket og som har Magt over sit Publikum; thi det er sikkert, at denne Symfoni vil falde aldeles til Jorden selv under en fejlfri Udførelse, hvis ikke Dirigenten er i personlig forstaaelse med sine tilhørere.

Maa vi have Lov til at bemærke følgende: I 1ste Sats Pag 14 er det Assai piu vivo meget føleligt [nærværende udgave takt 69]. Ved Pag 19-20 bør den kromatiske Gang i Clar: og Fag: være saa rolig, slangeglat som muligt [takt 107-111].

I 3die burde der ved Bogstav A. (Pag 81) [takt 31] staa piu vivo som gjælder indtil Pag 83 Takt 2 [takt 43], derpaa igjen 4 Takter piu vivo o.s.v."[48]

Wilhelm Stenhammar tog åbenbart ikke Carl Nielsens anvisning til efterretning, idet anmærkningen ikke er tilføjet i stemmesættet, som anvendtes i Göteborg i 1910. At bemærkningen più mosso (tredje sats, t. 31) alligevel findes tilføjet i nogle af stemmerne skyldes formodentlig, at Carl Nielsens svigersøn Emil Telmányi[49] dirigerede symfonien i december 1925 og ved den lejlighed foretog en noget omfattende, men dog ikke stringent, tilretning af stemmematerialet.[50] At Telmányi har

That Telmányi followed one of Carl Nielsen's instructions could suggest that he had gone through the work with the composer.[51]

In 1927 Carl Nielsen informed The Music Society that "because of infirmity he must withdraw from his post as conductor".[52] Among the applicants for the vacant post were Emil Telmányi, Rued Langgaard and Ebbe Hamerik,[53] and "after discussions among all members [it was resolved] unanimously to choose as the conductor for the next season Ebbe Hamerik".[54] As a gesture towards the departing conductor the young Ebbe Hamerik decided to perform Carl Nielsen's symphony for the first time at The Music Society on 13th February 1928. For the occasion Hamerik worked through the symphony in terms of dynamics, articulation and phrasing. But in addition he was asked by Carl Nielsen to orchestrate a short passage of the fourth movement (bb. 212-242), which the composer is said to have reworked and written down quickly in piano notation on a single music sheet.[55] In that connection Hamerik contacted the composer and by all indications sent a rough draft of the orchestrated passage to Carl Nielsen with the following remark: "At this point the instrumentation is as indicated below. Instead I have used the instrumentation from eight bars before the cut because the oboe then has a fresh effect on its entry with the subject. NB Should this place be major or minor?".[56] The composer presumably replied to the specific question and accepted the orchestration of his change; Hamerik then went to work on a fair copy of the passage and pasted it into his 51 The change suggested to Stenhammar is only found in Telmányi; either later conductors did not wish to use it or Carl Nielsen regretted it in 1928.

55 The sheet of music has probably been lost. It is mentioned by Ebbe Hamerik on a questionnaire from 1935 in connection with a major collection of Carl Nielsen's manuscripts for the Royal Library, where a large number of people were asked to indicate what manuscripts by Carl Nielsen they had. Ebbe Hamerik's reply says among other things: "Symphony No. 1 G minor: Change in last movement made in Lillehammer in 1928 and written on a scrap of music paper in piano notation. Carl Nielsen asked me to do the instrumentation and approved it for Musikforeningen's performance of the symphony in the spring of 1928". fulgt en af Carl Nielsens anvisninger kunne tyde på, at han gennemgik værket sammen med komponisten.[51]

I 1927 meddelte Carl Nielsen Musikforeningen, at "han paa Grund af Svækkelse maa tage Afsked fra sin Post som Dirigent".[52] Blandt ansøgerne til den ledige post var Emil Telmányi, Rued Langgaard og Ebbe Hamerik,[53] og "Efter Forhandling af samtlige Medlemmer [vedtoges] det enstemmigt som Dirigent for næste Saison at vælge Ebbe Hamerik".[54] Som en gestus over for den afgåede dirigent valgte den unge Ebbe Hamerik at opføre Carl Nielsens symfoni for første gang i Musikforeningen den 13. februar 1928. I den anledning gennemarbejdede Hamerik symfonien med hensyn til dynamik, artikulation og frasering. Men derudover blev han af Carl Nielsen bedt om at instrumentere et kortere afsnit af fjerdesatsen (t. 212-242), som Carl Nielsen angiveligt havde omarbejdet og hastigt noteret i klaversats på et enkelt nodeblad.[55] Hamerik kontaktede i den forbindelse komponisten og sendte efter alt at dømme en kladde til den instrumenterede passage til Carl Nielsen med følgende bemærkning: "Paa dette Sted er Instrumentationen som nedenfor angivet. I Stedet har jeg benyttet Instrumentationen fra 8 Takter før Springet, fordi Oboen saa virker frisk ved sin Indtræden med Temaet. NB Skal Stedet være Dur eller Moll?".[56] Komponisten har formodentlig svaret på det konkrete spørgsmål og accepteret instrumentationen af sin ændring. Hamerik gik derefter i gang med renskrivningen af passagen og indklæbede den i sit eget eksemplar af

51 Den til Stenhammar foreslåede ændring findes kun hos Telmányi; enten har senere dirigenter ikke villet anvende ændringen, eller også fortrød Carl Nielsen ændringen i 1928.

55 Nodebladet er formentlig gået tabt. Det omtales af Ebbe Hamerik på et spørgeskema fra 1935 i forbindelse med en større indsamling af Carl Nielsens manuskripter til Det Kongelige Bibliotek, hvor en lang række personer blev bedt om at angive, hvilke manuskripter fra Carl Nielsens hånd, de lå inde med. I Ebbe Hameriks besvarelse hedder det blandt andet: "Symfoni Nr. 1 G moll: Ændring i sidste Sats foretaget i Lillehammer 1928 og nedskrevet paa en Lap Nodepapir i Klaversystem. own copy of the printed score (Source A2) and into the newly-bought parts (Source C1).[57] While Carl Nielsen was on a skiing holiday in Lillehammer in February 1928, he sent a letter to his friend Vera Michaelsen,[58] where he wrote:

"We are coming home on Sunday morning with the steamer. — For at 12.30, as promised, we are to go to the full rehearsal of my 1st symph: at The Music Society [i.e. Sund. 12th], which Hamerik has really studied with great thoroughness and love, as is evident from letters, discussions before we left [20.1.1928] and several questions he has asked".[59]

The concert, which was broadcast on the radio, was given good reviews in the newspapers, which thought that "Mr. Hamerik conducted the symphony with a strong emphasis on its striking singularity, a performance which with its rich character was certainly quite in the spirit of the work",[60] and that "the conductor [drew] the lines of the symphony with the most intimate and profound understanding of the value of the work".[61] Axel Kjerulf furthermore wrote in Politiken of the "first symphonic work, which in its concise form and precise mode of expression already gives us Carl Nielsen so highly personally in all his healthy independence. It was amusing to hear it again; here he is neither as great and encompassing, nor as gentle and as human as later, but one recognizes him feature by feature — as if seeing, through the tough, strong, adamant expression with its willed stubbornness, his still young face.

Ebbe Hamerik performed the symphony with a mobility and flowing lightness which at one and the same time energetically traced out the characterful line and gave it full vitality; it was excellent — and well deserved the loud applause at the end, which was also addressed to the attending composer".[62]

The concise form and precise mode of expression (probably referring to things like the brief, non-Lied-like phrasing) which Kjerulf thought characteristic of the First Symphony had already been emphasized by Carl Nielsen himself with exactly det trykte partitur (kilde A2) og i de nyindkøbte stemmer (kilde C1).[57] Mens Carl Nielsen var på skiferie i Lillehammer i februar 1928, sendte han et brev til veninden Vera Michaelsen,[58] hvor han skriver:

"Vi kommer hjem Søndag Morgen med Damper. — Kl 121/2 skal vi nemlig efter Løfte til Generalprøve paa min 1ste Symf: i Musikforeningen [dvs. sønd. d.12], som Hamerik virkelig har studeret med stor Grundighed og Kærlighed, hvad der fremgaar af Breve, Forhandling inden vi rejste [20.1.1928] samt ved forskellige Spørgsmaal han har gjort".[59]

Koncerten, der transmitteredes i Radioen, fik gode anmeldelser i dagspressen, som fandt, at "Hr. Hamerik dirigerede Symfonien med skarp Fremhæven af dens markante Ejendommelighed, en Præstation, der ved sin Karakterfuldhed sikkert var nøje i Værkets Aand",[60] og at "Dirigenten [trak] Symfoniens Linier op med den inderligste og dybeste Forstaaelse af Værkets Værd".[61] Derudover skrev Axel Kjerulf i Politiken, at det

"første symfoniske Arbejde, der i sin knappe Form og præcise Udtryksmaade allerede giver Carl Nielsen saa stærkt personligt i hele hans sunde Selvstændighed. Det var morsomt at høre den igen; han er her hverken saa stor og saa vidtfavnende, heller ikke saa mild og saa menneskelig som senere, men man genkender ham Træk for Træk — ser ligesom gennem det barske, stærke og stejle Udtryk med den villede Stædighed hans stadig unge Ansigt.

Ebbe Hamerik fremførte Symfonien med en Bevægelighed og strømmende Lethed, der paa samme Tid energisk tegnede den karakterfulde Linje og gav dens frie Livfuldhed; det var udmærket — og velfortjent det stærke Bifald til sidst, der ogsaa adresseredes til den tilstedeværende Komponist".[62]

Den knappe form og præcise udtryksmåde (skal formodentlig forstås som den koncise form og de kortere, ikke-liedprægede fraseringer), som Kjerulf mente karakteriserede første symfoni, var allerede fremhævet af Carl Nielsen selv med præcis de

the same words in 1896, when he contrasted it with the "German gravy and fat". The idea is also suggested in a letter the composer wrote til Stenhammar in 1910, where he hoped that the "weak and far too lyrical aspects" could be disregarded. Thus Carl Nielsen is saying indirectly that the important thing is to maintain the form and the shorter phrasings. Precisely these important aspects of the work are clarified in a longish review by Julius Rabe in connection with a performance of the symphony in Gothenburg in 1918 under the baton of the composer.[63] Rabe's discussion is important, because Carl Nielsen replied very positively and even agreed with Rabe's characterization.[64] The first symphony, which is very rigorously structured according to the classical musical forms (for example the sonata form), is according to Rabe an expression of "a clear will to form, of an unconditional dissociation from all that does not directly serve the expression through its formal value". Rabe continues:

"However much the symphony moves in quite normal form, and therefore might easily have a schematic effect, there is not a dead point in its line, not a bar that could be removed without losing the power in its proud towering [...] And whoever experiences a form in an artistic way always experiences a fiery act of will [...] Towards this an emphatically formal art can help us, and in music Carl Nielsen stands almost as the only one who can bring us closer to this life-mood of the future. That is why his art is in the highest degree pertinent to us".[65]

Like Carl Nielsen in the letter in 1896, Rabe particularly involves Wagner in the discussion as an opposite pole to Carl Nielsen, where the Wagnerian "gravy and fat" — according to Rabe this is for example the contentless accompaniment figures like tremoli in the strings — are conspicuously absent

But I think that I should particularly be permitted to be proud that my early symphony has given you cause for such profound, striking and fundamental thoughts about the great question of form which will always continue to be a burning one because in reality it involves the two extremes of human nature which never can nor dare nor must find rest beyond looking out for new possibilities".

samme ord i 1896, hvor han stillede det i modsætning til den "tyske Sauce og Fedme". Ideen er også antydet i et brev, som komponisten skrev til Stenhammar i 1910, hvori han håber, at man kan se bort fra det "svage og altfor lyriske". Dermed siger Carl Nielsen indirekte, at det væsentlige netop er at holde fast i formen og de kortere fraseringer. Netop disse vigtige aspekter ved værket er uddybet i en længere anmeldelse af Julius Rabe i forbindelse med en opførelse af symfonien i Göteborg i 1918 under komponistens direktion.[63] Rabes diskussion er vigtig, fordi Carl Nielsen svarede meget positivt og endda var enig i Rabes karakterisering.[64] Første symfoni, som er opbygget meget strengt efter de klassiske musikalske former (bl.a. sonateformen), er ifølge Rabe et udtryk for "en klar vilja till form, av ett obetingat avståndstagande från allt, som icke omedelbart genom sitt formvärde tjänar uttrycket". Rabe fortsætter:

"Ehuru symfonien rör sig i helt vanlig form, och därför lätt skulle kunna verka schematisk, finns det icke en död punkt i dess linje, icke en takt, som kunde vara borta, utan att kraften i dess stolta resning skulle gå förlorad [...] Och den som på konstnärligt sätt upplever en form, upplever alltid en eldig viljeakt [...] Till detta kan en formbetonad konst hjälpa oss, och inom musiken står Carl Nielsen som nästan den ende, som kan bringa oss närmare denne framtidens livsstämning. Därför är hans konst oss i högsta grad aktuell".[65]

Ligesom Carl Nielsen gjorde det i brevet i 1896, drager Rabe specielt Wagner ind i diskussionen som en modpol til Carl Nielsen, hvor den wagnerske "Sauce og Fedme" — ifølge Rabe er det for eksempel de indholdsløse akkompagnementsfigurer så som tremoli i strygere — netop mangler hos Carl Nielsen. from Carl Nielsen's work. By contrast Nielsen's counterpoint is in "every detail the bearer of a constructive idea, serving not sonorous sensuality but the tension of the architecture, the logic of development". What Carl Nielsen considered essential in the symphony (but what he apparently thought in 1910 in the letter to Stenhammar could be done better), was also what was noticed at the premiere and what later became a part of his musical personality.

Just 13 days after Hamerik's performance of the symphony at The Music Society the work was played at a Palæ concert — this time with Carl Nielsen conducting. It was usual for The Music Society and Schnedler-Petersen, who during the years 1909-1931 was responsible for the Palæ concerts, to use the same musicians;[66] but it is more interesting that for the occasion Carl Nielsen apparently borrowed the part material from The Music Society and thus performed the symphony with Hamerik's revision and his own reworking of the passage in the fourth movement in Hamerik's orchestration.[67] This is evident from several of the orchestral parts, which feature the dates of both the The Music Society concert and the Palæ concert.[68] The day before the concert, 26th February, the composer wrote in Hamerik's copy of the symphony a dedication that clearly shows the composer's respect for Hamerik's work: "To my young highly gifted friend Ebbe Hamerik with thanks for his excellent and perfectly conceived execution of this work from his devoted / Carl Nielsen / 25-II-28". Carl Nielsen's performance too was a success, and "the maestro was acclaimed after each movement and called up with enthusiasm after the end of the symphony"[69] by the small audience.[70] The reviewer from Nationaltidende, "–r–h.", deals less with the music than with Carl Nielsen's conducting, perhaps indirectly prompted by Hamerik's conducting technique, which he had experienced a fortnight earlier:

gengæld er Nielsens kontrapunktik i "varje detalj bärare av en konstruktiv idé, tjänar icke den klangsinnligheten, utan arkitektonikens spänning, utvecklingens logik". Det, som Carl Nielsen fandt væsentligt ved symfonien (men som han i 1910 i brevet til Stenhammar åbenbart mente kunne gøres bedre), var også det, som ved premieren blev bemærket, og som senere blev en del af hans musikalske personlighed.

Allerede 13 dage efter Hameriks opførelse af symfonien i Musikforeningen spilledes værket ved en Palækoncert — denne gang med Carl Nielsen som dirigent. Det var almindeligt, at Musikforeningen og Schnedler-Petersen, som i årene 1909-1931 stod for Palækoncerterne, brugte de samme musikere;[66] men mere interessant er det, at Carl Nielsen til lejligheden åbenbart havde lånt Musikforeningens stemmemateriale og dermed opført symfonien med Hameriks revision og sin egen omarbejdelse af passagen i fjerde sats i Hameriks instrumentation.[67] Dette fremgår tydeligt af flere af orkesterstemmerne, som indeholder både dateringen for Musikforeningens koncert og for Palækoncerten.[68] Dagen før koncerten den 26. februar skrev komponisten i Hameriks eksemplar af symfonien en dedikation, der tydeligt viser komponistens respekt for Hameriks arbejde: "Til min unge højtbegavede Ven Ebbe Hamerik med Tak for hans fortræffelige og helstøbte Udførelse af dette Værk fra hans hengivne Carl Nielsen / 25-II-28". Også Carl Nielsens opførelse var en succes, og "Mesteren hyldedes efter hver Sats og fremkaldtes med Begejstring efter Symfoniens Slutning"[69] af det fåtallige publikum.[70] Nationaltidendes anmelder "–r–h." kommer ikke så meget ind på musikken men mere på Carl Nielsens direktion, måske indirekte foranlediget af Hameriks direktionsteknik, som han havde oplevet to uger før:

70 Nationaltidende, 27.2.1928: "Det kunde dog have sin Interesse at høre, hvorledes Værkets Autor selv vilde forme Udførelsen; men det maa desværre siges, at nogen større Publikumstilstrømning var der ikke at spore i Salen"; Politiken, 27.2.1928: "Folk var taget i Skoven for at slikke Solskin, kun overmaade faa havde undt sig selv den Fornøjelse at gaa paa Koncert og høre Carl Nielsen dirigere sin Ungdoms g-mol Symfoni"; København, 27.2.1928: "Men trods dette virkelige vægtige Program var Besøget meget, meget magert".

"It was a successful performance, vitally animated by the composer's peculiar and highly characteristic conducting. There is no emotionality, no gushing in his way of conducting the orchestra, but the angular, almost mechanically accentuated movements have a formal power to put things, or at least the main thing, in place; and he can achieve a grace all his own at the lyrical points by simply cocking his head on one side with his own special appealing expression".[71]

In the autumn of the same year Launy Grøndahl[72] put together a programme of music by Carl Nielsen which was broadcast over the radio. Besides the Helios overture, duets from the operas Saul and David and Masquerade, Symphony No. 1 was performed. Grøndahl too used the reworked version of the fourth movement on this occasion, which must have been accepted, if not actually recommended, by Carl Nielsen, who was present at the rehearsals.[73]

That the composer was aware that the work had some weaknesses is evident from the above-quoted letter to Stenhammar from 1910. But as early as 1905 Carl Nielsen had mentioned that the First Symphony was perhaps not quite as he had intended it:

"I believe that music is still far from having reached its culmination point in the power to express human feelings and moods; but what direction developments will take is at present impossible to say. So much is clear to me, however, that there are immense possibilities hidden in the harmonic and modulatory, and if I am not greatly mistaken the future will reject our modern keys, minor and major, as inadequate to the expression of the mental and emotional life of a modern human being. The idea of quarter-tones, said to be under consideration in Germany, appeals greatly to me. Several times — for example at one point in my first symphony — I have actually felt the lack of a more finely shaded tonal system".[74]

Unfortunately Carl Nielsen gives no further detail of where specifically in the symphony he felt this lack.[75]

75 Possibly in the third movement, where the subject is chromatically constructed around a main note.

"Det var en vellykket Udførelse, livligt animeret af Komponistens ejendommelige og meget karakteristiske Dirigeren. Der er intet Føleri, ej heller nogen Svulmen i hans Maade at lede Orkestret, men de kantede, næsten mekanisk accentuerede Bevægelser har en formel Evne til at stille Tingene, eller i hvert fald Hovedsagen, paa Plads; og en egen Ynde kan han opnaa paa de lyriske Steder ved blot at lægge Hovedet paa Sned med det ham egne indtagende Udtryk".[71]

Om efteråret samme år sammensatte Launy Grøndahl[72] et program med musik af Carl Nielsen, som udsendtes i radioen. Foruden Helios-ouverturen, duetter fra operaerne Saul og David og Maskarade opførtes også Symfoni Nr. 1. Også Grøndahl anvendte den omarbejdede version af fjerde sats ved denne lejlighed, hvilket må have været accepteret, om ikke ligefrem anbefalet, af Carl Nielsen, som var til stede under prøverne.[73]

At komponisten var opmærksom på, at værket havde nogle svagheder, fremgår af ovenfor citerede brev til Stenhammar fra 1910. Men allerede i 1905 nævner Carl Nielsen, at den første symfoni måske ikke er helt sådan, som han havde tænkt sig den:

"Jeg tror, at Musiken endnu langt fra har naaet sit Kulminationspunkt i Evnen til at udtrykke menneskelige Følelser og Stemninger; men i hvilken Retning, Udviklingen vil bære hen, er i Øjeblikket umuligt at sige. Saa meget staar mig dog klart, at der ligger uhyre mange Muligheder skjulte i det harmoniske og modulatoriske, og jeg skulde tage meget Fejl, om ikke Fremtiden vil forkaste vore moderne Tonearter, Moll og Dur, som utilstrækkelige til at udtrykke et moderne Menneskes Tanke- og Følelses-Liv. Tanken om Kvart-Toner, som skal være oppe i Tyskland, tiltaler mig i høj Grad, og jeg har flere Gange, bl.a. et Sted i min første Symphonie, ligefrem følt Savnet af et finere nuanceret Tonesystem".[74]

Desværre kommer Carl Nielsen ikke nærmere ind på, nøjagtigt hvor i symfonien han har følt dette savn.[75]

75 Muligvis i tredjesatsen, hvor temaet er kromatisk opbygget omkring en hovedtone.

In general there is a relatively high degree of agreement among Telmányi's, Hamerik's and Grøndahl's revisions, if the reworked passage of the fourth movement is disregarded. The differences are mainly matters of articulation and phrasing, inasmuch as Telmányi marks articulation more extensively, adding especially staccato and marcato in the strings, while Hamerik for example has changed short phrasing slurs into longer ones; both Hamerik and Grøndahl used the change in the passage in the fourth movement, which as mentioned above had in all probability come from Carl Nielsen himself. Against that background Telmányi's rather negative and misleading attack on Hamerik — and only Hamerik — seems incomprehensible.[76] At the same time it is clear that both Hamerik and Grøndahl were far more stringent in their revisions, while it is evident from Telmányi's material that he was first and foremost a violinist and therefore concentrated his revision on the strings.

It is thought-provoking that all three conductors considered it necessary to make extensive changes and additions with regard to phrasing, dynamics and articulation. The reason may be that the work was far less thoroughly worked through by the composer than one sees in works published earlier. There are for example a number of note and rhythm errors as well as numerous incomplete phrasings caused exclusively by page turns — all things that a careful proof-reader could have spotted.[77] But besides this the revisions may also reflect the considerable changes in performance practice and musical ideals between the time of the first performance in 1894, when Johan Svendsen conducted more or less without additions of any kind, and the end of the 1920s, when the playing style entailed a far higher degree of detail, especially in the notation of articulation and dynamics — a development Carl Nielsen presumably accepted, since on at least one occasion, by all indications, he used the revised material.[78]

There can thus be no doubt that Carl Nielsen was satisfied with Hamerik's revision and with his orchestration of the reworked passage in the fourth movement, bb. 212-242, 76 Emil Telmányi, op. cit., pp. 106-107. See also Niels Krabbe, op. cit.

77 It is similarly clear that the music engraver often had problems interpreting Carl Nielsen's intentions in the fair copy and therefore limited himself to reproducing the insufficiencies of the source.

78 The first symphony was also performed under the composer's baton in Stockholm, 7.12.1928, and in Odense, 1.2.1929; there is no information on which version the composer chose to use.

Der er i det store og hele overensstemmelse mellem Telmányis, Hameriks og Grøndahls revisioner, når man ser bort fra den omarbejdede passage i fjerde sats. Forskellene går fortrinsvis på artikulation og frasering, idet Telmányis artikulation er mere omfattende med især tilføjelser af staccato og marcato i strygerne, mens Hamerik for eksempel har ændret korte fraseringsbuer til at være længere; både Hamerik og Grøndahl anvendte ændringen af passagen i fjerde sats, der som nævnt efter al sandsynlighed var udgået fra Carl Nielsen selv. På den baggrund kan Telmányis noget negative og misvisende udfald mod Hamerik — og kun Hamerik — virke uforståelig.[76] Samtidig er det tydeligt, at både Hamerik og Grøndahl var langt mere stringente i revisionerne, hvorimod det fremgår af Telmányis materiale, at han først og fremmest var violinist og derfor koncentrerede sine revisioner til strygerne.

Det er tankevækkende, at alle tre dirigenter fandt det nødvendigt at foretage omfattende ændringer og tilføjelser med hensyn til frasering, dynamik og artikulation. Årsagen kunne være, at værket i langt mindre grad, end hvad man ser i tidligere udgivne værker, er ordentligt gennemarbejdet af komponisten. Der er således en række nodefejl og rytmiske fejl, foruden talrige ufuldstændige fraseringer, som udelukkende er opstået ved sideskift — alt sammen noget, som en grundig korrektur kunne have fanget.[77] Men derudover afspejler revisionerne måske også, at de spilletekniske og musikalske idealer ændrede sig betydeligt fra første gang værket blev spillet i 1894, hvor Johan Svendsen dirigerede stort set uden tilføjelser af nogen art, til slutningen af 1920erne, hvor spillestilen medførte kravet om en langt større detaljeringsgrad, specielt i notationen af artikulation og dynamik — en udvikling Carl Nielsen formodentlig accepterede, idet han som nævnt ved mindst én lejlighed, efter alt at dømme anvendte det reviderede materiale.[78]

Der kan således ikke herske tvivl om, at Carl Nielsen har været tilfreds med Hameriks revision og med hans instrumentation af den omarbejdede passage i fjerde sats takt 212-

76 Emil Telmányi, op. cit., s. 106-107. Se også Niels Krabbe, op. cit.

77 Det er ligeledes tydeligt, at nodestikkeren ofte har haft problemer med at tyde Carl Nielsens intentioner i renskriften og derfor nøjedes med at gengive kildens ufuldstændigheder.

78 Første symfoni blev også opført under komponistens ledelse i Stockholm, 7.12.1928, og Odense, 1.2.1929; der eksisterer dog ingen information om, hvilken version, komponisten valgte at bruge.

but there is no basis in the sources for assuming that the composer actually preferred the new version to his original one. At all events he never orchestrated the passage in question himself.

Carl Nielsen's own copy of the printed score of the symphony, which might have included corrections, appears to have been lost. The main source chosen is therefore an ordinary copy of the printed score (first edition), which has been compared with the fair copy.[79] Ebbe Hamerik's orchestration of the reworked passage of the final movement has not been incorporated in the score in this edition; but because of Carl Nielsen's own contribution to the change it is reproduced in its entirety as a facsimile (pp. xxix-xxxii) and as an appendix to the music (pp. 156-159).[80] Other contemporary revisions, especially those by Hamerik and Telmányi, have not been included in the list of emendations and alternative readings. Many of the emendations do, however, correspond to Hamerik's, Telmányi's and Grøndahl's, although they have been made on the basis of analogical completion, not the scores and part materials of the three conductors.

242, men der er intet kildebelæg for, at komponisten ligefrem har foretrukket den nye version frem for sin oprindelige. I hvert fald instrumenterede han aldrig selv den pågældende passage.

Tilsyneladende er Carl Nielsens håndeksemplar af symfonien, som kunne indeholde rettelser, gået tabt. Som hovedkilde er derfor valgt et eksemplar af det trykte partitur (førsteudgave), der er blevet sammenlignet med renskriften.[79] Ebbe Hameriks instrumentation af den omarbejdede passage af Finalen er ikke inddraget i revisionen, men på grund af Carl Nielsens eget bidrag til ændringen er den gengivet i sin helhed som facsimile (s. xxix-xxxii) og som appendiks til nodesatsen (s. 156-159).[80] Andre samtidige revisioner, specielt af Hamerik og Telmányi, er ikke medtaget i revisions- og variantfortegnelsen. Mange af nærværende udgaves revisioner stemmer dog overens med Hameriks, Telmányis og Grøndahls, skønt de er foretaget på grundlag af en analogikomplettering og ikke med belæg i de tre dirigenters partiturer og stemmemateriale.

CRITICAL COMMENTARY

In the Critical Commentary the following conventions are used:

1 "by analogy with" is used when something has been "added", "emended" or "omitted" by analogy with another passage in the main source. The analogy may be vertical. When something is added "by analogy with" one or more instruments, it is understood that the analogy is with the same place in the same bar(s).
Or it may be horizontal. When something is added "by analogy with" one or more bars, it is understood that the analogy is with a parallel place in the same instrument(s).

2 "as in" is used when something is "added", "emended" or "omitted" to correspond to the same place in another source.

3 "in accordance with" is used in cases where there is no authoritative source, only a guideline – for example printed part material.

In the bar number column, the symbol "+" is used to indicate an upbeat to the bar in question.

The bifolio's fol. 2ᵛ has the end-dating "Komponistens Ændring. Ebbe Hamerik d. 3 Feb. 1928".[3] The score also has a number of additions and changes in pencil and a number added in ink, mainly concerning dynamics, execution markings and articulation. Some of the pencil additions have later been erased, while others have been gone over in ink.

Title: “Carl Nielsen. / Symfoni Op. 7. / (Partitur)”.
End-datings: the first movement has “4/12 93”, the second movement “1/12 93”, the third movement “19/12 93” and the fourth movement “14/1 94”.
Donated to Kungliga Musikaliska Akademiens Bibliotek, Stockholm, by Carl Nielsen in 1917; see dedication added in ink by Carl Nielsen on the inside of the binding opposite the first page of music: “Til / ‘Kong[1] svenska musikaliska Akademien’ / i Ærbødighed / fra / Carl Nielsen / Kjøbenhavn 26[de] Februar 1917.”[4]
34.1x25.5 cm, 166 numbered pages written in ink; black half-binding with title in gold print, privately bound by Carl Nielsen.[5] During the binding the pages have been cut.
Paper type: two types used (pp. 1-54 glazed; pp. 55-166 plain), both with 18 hand-ruled staves.
The torn pages of the score have been restored on accession.
All folios have many horizontal and vertical folding creases often 11-13 on one folio; on pp. 53-56 the bottom empty staves have been torn out. The tempo marking on the first music page has been changed from “Allegro marcato” to “Allegro orgoglioso” in pencil (Carl Nielsen) and “Symfoni Op. 7” has been added in pencil (library hand). On pp. 166 Carl Nielsen has noted “Stokmar / Skindergade 47” in pencil, and below this “Skindergade 47” has been added in pencil in a different hand. The score has numerous notes added in pencil by the engraver, including page divisions, some of which are also in red crayon (second movement) and calculations of the number of plates; on p. 113 (first music page of fourth movement) the plate number “11,486” has been added in ink, presumably by the engraver. Many additions have also been made in the music (mainly dynamics, note corrections, slurs and ties) in pencil by the composer, many of these prompted by notes (question marks, crosses and “NB”) added in the margin in pencil by a different hand; the proof-reader’s remarks have often meant that the original music has been erased and changed, or that additions have been made, at first in pencil then gone over in ink by Carl Nielsen. A few corrections have also been added in mauve crayon and a few conductor’s notes in pencil (Johan Svendsen?).

34x26.9 cm, 39 parts, many in loose folios which must originally, however, have been in bifolios, unbound. The set of parts, stamped “Musikforeningen / København”, has numerous additions and corrections in pencil, the great majority gone over in ink (Ebbe Hamerik). Some of the corrections/additions have later been crossed out in pencil. There are further a few additions in red and blue crayon, some probably by Hamerik. Hamerik’s reworking of the fourth movement, bb. 210-236, is pasted in; this reworking is however crossed out in pencil in some of the parts (va. (no. 2); missing or removed in vc. (no. 3)) and in cb. (no. 1) “Pause til 𝄩” [“Rest until 𝄩”] has been added in pencil (Carl Nielsen?); in tr. and trb.t. 1 Hamerik’s pasted-in phrase has been crossed out with blue crayon corresponding to the crossing-out in A[1] and E; fl. 3 contains a concert programme for “Nordische Gesellschaft / Donnerstag, 5. Probably bought in 1910.
32.8x25.6 cm, whole set of parts (39 parts), stapled and sewn with a more recent brown cover.
The set of parts is stamped "EDUARD MAGNUS / MUSIK-FOND" and has many additions in pencil, and in red and blue crayon; 25 of the parts also have additions in ink by Emil Telmányi made in connection with a performance on 16.12.1925. This applies to the following parts: vl. 1 (no. 1), vl. 2 (no. 1), va. (no. 1), vc. (no. 1), cb. (no. 1, 2), fl., ob., fg., cor., tr., trb. t., trb. b. and timp. The set has however also been used in performances conducted by Wilhelm Stenhammar (16.11.1910, 13.3.1918) and Ture Rangström (11.10.1922, 1.3.1925). The great majority of pencil additions are of later date, while additions in red crayon were presumably made in connection with Stenhammar or Rangström's performances. Some of these additions have later been gone over in ink by Telmányi. Telmányi's additions are mainly related to dynamics and articulation, but a few note corrections have been made; slurs, bowing and execution markings have also been changed or added; there are some comments in Danish, too. A few parts are dated: vl.1 (no. 3) has "34 1/2 Min. / Dr Stenhammer / Gtb. 13 Mars 1918 / PCR" [Peder C. Rönn] added in pencil; trb. t. 1 has "L. Radio Denmark's Music Archives, sig. a1735.
Wilhelm Hansen, musikforlag, Pl. No.: 11486 (1894).
34x26.9 cm, 50 parts, among which one vc. part is stamped "No604", later crossed out with ballpoint. The set of parts contains pasted-in passages corresponding to Hamerik's reworking (except va., whose phrase is partly transposed up an octave so that it is in unison with vl. 1). The pasted-in passage is written in ink, probably by a copyist. There are also a number of additions in red ink, mainly in dynamics, made by Fritz Busch, as well as additions in red and blue crayon. There are many datings, the earliest of which is "18-10-28 / Radio Carl Broch" added in blue crayon in fg. 1 (p. 9). The same dating is found in fg. 2 (p. 7): "Radio 18-10-28 / K. Roikjer" added in pencil. A piece of cardboard has been laid in with the set of parts, stating that "det gamle materiale er mærket a / Ominstrumenteret af Busch og Grøndahl / N.B: Nyt materiale er mærket med B".[7] The set of parts was thus used on 18.10.1928, a radio transmitted concert conducted by Launy Grøndahl and attended by Carl Nielsen.[8]

E Autograph short score, draft.

Unknown provenance, possibly donated by Emil Telmányi through Torben Schousboe in 1990.
26.7x34.6 cm, 1 folio written on both sides in pencil.
Paper type: 26 staves.
Ebbe Hamerik's reworking of the fourth movement, bb. 212-242. A few additions in ink, a crossing-out in blue crayon (bb. 217-224); bb. 238-242 (fol. 1^{v}) has the following comment added at the top of the page: "Paa dette Sted er Instrumentationen / som angivet nedenfor. I Stedet / har jeg benyttet Instrumentationen / fra 8 takter før Springet, fordi Oboen / saa virker frisk ved sin Indtræden / med Temaet. / NB Skal Stedet være Dur eller Moll?".[13] The folio has 3 vertical creases and 1 horizontal crease, suggesting that the folio was sent as a letter. Notated at the bottom of 9 "Second subject for the Scherzo".

10 "Leitmotif for Finale".
11 "Labyrinth! long cresc! ~~Until~~ second subject breaks / through".
12 "Beginning of modulation to Finale".
13 "At this point the instrumentation is / as indicated below. Instead / I have used the instrumentation / from 8 bars before the cut, because the oboe / then has a fresh effect on its entry / with the subject. / NB Should this place be major or minor?".

the page in pencil is: "[Emil Telmànyis håndskrift. / forslag til ændret instrumentation af 1. symfoni 4. sats]"[14] in Torben Schousboe's hand. Thus Schousboe mistakes Telmányi's handwriting for Hamerik's.

Paper type: 14 hand-ruled staves, paper of different grades and five folios with 14 printed staves.
The piano score has partly been restored.
Many corrections in pencil and red crayon, some of which, often in the dynamics, are in Carl Nielsen's hand; some of the pages have first been written in pencil and then gone over in ink; many bars pasted over. G was not used as a printing manuscript for F.

FILIATION AND EVALUATION OF SOURCES

The earliest and most complete version of the First Symphony (op. 7) is the ink fair copy (B), which was probably used for the first performance in March 1894 and later functioned as the printing manuscript for the first edition (A) in the late summer of 1894. The draft has not been preserved; on the other hand a large number of sketches for parts of the work (D^{1}, D^{2}, D^{3}, D^{4}), providing insight into the composition process, have been preserved. Nor has the manuscript part material used at the premiere been preserved; these parts were probably used as the source for the printed parts (C) despite the fact that the printed score was available before the engraving of the parts was begun. Discrepancies between C and A, B may thus be due to the fact that the musicians at the first performance added changes suggested by the conductor and possibly the composer during the rehearsals. At the same time the collation reveals that Nielsen, after the copying of the part material and after the first performance, but before the engraving, must have made further additions and corrections in B. During the proof-reading of A he especially made additions in dynamics and articulation, more so in the fourth movement than in the other movements.

Another interesting source is C^{2}, a set of parts with Telmányi's additions and changes, mainly in dynamics, articulation and phrasing. The most thoroughly reviewed parts were the string parts. It is likely that Telmányi consulted Nielsen, but there is no proof of this. In 1928 Hamerik carried out an extensive revision of the symphony (A^{1}, C^{1}, E), which as regards articulation and dynamics often agrees with Telmányi's. Hamerik's revision is, however, far more stringent and is equally distributed among all the parts. Hamerik corresponded with the composer about the revision and on one occasion Carl Nielsen himself used Source C^{1}. Nielsen's reworking of the passage in the fourth movement (bb. 212-242) also appears in Source C^{3} — the radio part material used by Launy Grøndahl in 1928.

Since there is no reliable evidence that Carl Nielsen wholly preferred the reworking to the original version, it has not been incorporated in this edition but reproduced as a facsimile and included as an appendix. The numerous additions and changes (variants) in Sources C^{1}, C^{2} and C^{3} have not been included in the Critical Commentary, since these sources have been placed relatively low in the source hierarchy. Among other sources the fair copy of a piano arrangement for four hands (G), which was printed in 1901 (Source F), should be singled out.
